

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

HART-LEAP WELL.

Hart-Leap Well is a small spring of water, about five miles from Richmond in Yorkshire, and near the side of the road which leads from Richmond to Askrigg. Its name is derived from a remarkable Chase, the memory of which is preserved by the monuments spoken of in the second Part of the following Poem, which monuments do now exist as I have there described them.

---

The Knight had ridden down from Wensley moor
With the slow motion of a summer's cloud ;
He turned aside towards a Vassal's door,
And, " Bring another Horse !" he cried aloud.

" Another Horse !" — That shout the Vassal heard,
And saddled his best steed, a comely gray ;
Sir Walter mounted him ; he was the third
Which he had mounted on that glorious day.

Joy sparkled in the prancing Courser's eyes;
The Horse and Horseman are a happy pair;
But, though Sir Walter like a falcon flies,
There is a doleful silence in the air.

A rout this morning left Sir Walter's Hall,
That as they galloped made the echoes roar;
But Horse and Man are vanished, one and all;
Such race, I think, was never seen before.

Sir Walter, restless as a veering wind,
Calls to the few tired Dogs that yet remain:
Brach, Swift, and Music, noblest of their kind,
Follow, and up the weary mountain strain.

The Knight hallooed, he chid and cheered them on
With suppliant gestures and upbraidings stern;
But breath and eye-sight fail; and, one by one,
The Dogs are stretched among the mountain fern.

Where is the throng, the tumult of the race ?
The bugles that so joyfully were blown ?
—This Chase it looks not like an earthly Chase ;
Sir Walter and the Hart are left alone.

The poor Hart toils along the mountain side ;
I will not stop to tell how far he fled,
Nor will I mention by what death he died ;
But now the Knight beholds him lying dead.

Dismounting then, he leaned against a thorn ;
He had no follower, Dog, nor Man, nor Boy :
He neither smacked his whip, nor blew his horn,
But gazed upon the spoil with silent joy.

Close to the thorn on which Sir Walter leaned,
Stood his dumb partner in this glorious act ;
Weak as a lamb the hour that it is yeaned,
And foaming like a mountain cataract.

Upon his side the Hart was lying stretched :
 His nose half-touched a spring beneath a hill,
 And with the last deep groan his breath had fetched
 The waters of the spring were trembling still.

And now, too happy for repose or rest,
 (Was never man in such a joyful case !)
 SirWalter walked all round, north, south, and west,
 And gazed and gazed upon that darling place.

And climbing up the hill—(it was at least Nine roods of sheer ascent) Sir Walter found
 Three several hoof-marks which the hunted Beast
 Had left imprinted on the verdant ground.

Sir Walter wiped his face and cried, “ Till now
 Such sight was never seen by living eyes :
 Three leaps have borne him from this lofty brow,
 Down to the very fountain where he lies.

I'll build a Pleasure-house upon this spot,
 And a small Arbour, made for rural joy ;
 'Twill be the Traveller's shed, the Pilgrim's cot,
 A place of love for Damsels that are coy.

A cunning Artist will I have to frame
 A bason for that Fountain in the dell ;
 And they who do make mention of the same
 From this day forth, shall call it HART-LEAP WELL.

And, gallant brute ! to make thy praises known,
 Another monument shall here be raised ;
 Three several Pillars, each a rough hewn Stone,
 And planted where thy hoofs the turf have grazed.

And in the summer-time when days are long,
 I will come hither with my Paramour ;
 And with the Dancers, and the Minstrel's song,
 We will make merry in that pleasant Bower.

Till the foundations of the mountains fail
 My Mansion with its Arbour shall endure ;—
 The joy of them who till the fields of Swale,
 And them who dwell among the woods of Ure !”

Then home he went, and left the Hart, stone-dead,
 With breathless nostrils stretched above the spring.
 And soon the Knight performed what he had said,
 The fame whereof through many a land did ring.

Ere thrice the moon into her port had steered,
 A Cup of Stone received the living Well ;
 Three Pillars of rude stone Sir Walter reared,
 And built a House of Pleasure in the dell.

And near the fountain, flowers of stature tall
 With trailing plants and trees were intertwined,
 Which soon composed a little sylvan Hall,
 A leafy shelter from the sun and wind.

And thither, when the summer-days were long,
Sir Walter journeyed with his Paramour;
And with the Dancers and the Minstrel's song
Made merriment within that pleasant Bower.

The Knight, Sir Walter, died in course of time,
And his bones lie in his paternal vale.—
But there is matter for a second rhyme,
And I to this would add another tale.

PART SECOND

The moving accident is not my trade :
To freeze the blood I have no ready arts :
'Tis my delight, alone in summer shade,
To pipe a simple song to thinking hearts.

As I from Hawes to Richmond did repair,
It chanced that I saw standing in a dell
Three Aspens at three corners of a square,
And one, not four yards distant, near a Well.

What this imported I could ill divine :
And, pulling now the rein my horse to stop,
I saw three Pillars standing in a line,
The last Stone Pillar on a dark hill-top.

The trees were gray, with neither arms nor head ;
 Half-wasted the square Mound of tawny green ;
 So that you just might say, as then I said,
 " Here in old time the hand of man has been."

I looked upon the hills both far and near,
 More doleful place did never eye survey ;
 It seemed as if the spring-time came not here,
 And Nature here were willing to decay.

I stood in various thoughts and fancies lost,
 When one, who was in Shepherd's garb attired,
 Came up the Hollow. Him did I accost,
 And what this place might be I then inquired.

The Shepherd stopped, and that same story told
 Which in my former rhyme I have rehearsed.
 " A jolly place," said he, " in times of old !
 But something ails it now ; the spot is curst.

You see these lifeless Stumps of aspen wood—
Some say that they are beeches, others elms—
These were the Bower; and here a Mansion stood,
The finest palace of a hundred realms !

The Arbour does its own condition tell;
You see the Stones, the Fountain, and the Stream,
But as to the great Lodge ! you might as well
Hunt half a day for a forgotten dream.

There's neither dog nor heifer, horse nor sheep,
Will wet his lips within that Cup of Stone ;
And oftentimes, when all are fast asleep,
This water doth send forth a dolorous groan.

Some say that here a murder has been done,
And blood cries out for blood : but, for my part,
I've guessed, when I've been sitting in the sun,
That it was all for that unhappy Hart.

What thoughts must through the creature's brain have passed !

From the stone upon the summit of the steep
Are but three bounds—and look, Sir, at this last—
—O Master ! it has been a cruel leap.

For thirteen hours he ran a desperate race ;
And in my simple mind we cannot tell
What cause the Hart might have to love this place,
And come and make his death-bed near the Well.

Here on the grass perhaps asleep he sank,
Lulled by this Fountain in the summer-tide ;
This water was perhaps the first he drank
When he had wandered from his mother's side.

In April here beneath the scented thorn
He heard the birds their morning carols sing ;
And he, perhaps, for aught we know, was born
Not half a furlong from that self-same spring.

But now here's neither grass nor pleasant shade ;
 The sun on drearier Hollow never shone :
 So will it be, as I have often said,
 Till Trees, and Stones, and Fountain all are gone."

" Gray-headed Shepherd, thou hast spoken well ;
 Small difference lies between thy creed and mine :
 This Beast not unobserved by Nature fell ;
 His death was mourned by sympathy divine.

The Being, that is in the clouds and air,
 That is in the green leaves among the groves,
 Maintains a deep and reverential care
 For them the quiet creatures whom he loves.

The Pleasure-house is dust :—behind, before,
 This is no common waste, no common gloom ;
 But Nature, in due course of time, once more
 Shall here put on her beauty and her bloom.

She leaves these objects to a slow decay,
That what we are, and have been, may be known;
But, at the coming of the milder day,
These monuments shall all be overgrown.

One lesson, Shepherd, let us two divide,
Taught both by what she shows, and what conceals,
Never to blend our pleasure or our pride
With sorrow of the meanest thing that feels."

There was a Boy, ye knew him well, ye Cliffs
And Islands of Winander ! many a time,
At evening, when the stars had just begun
To move along the edges of the hills,
Rising or setting, would he stand alone,
Beneath the trees, or by the glimmering lake ;
And there, with fingers interwoven, both hands
Pressed closely palm to palm and to his mouth
Uplifted, he, as through an instrument,
Blew mimic hootings to the silent owls
That they might answer him. And they would shout
Across the watery vale, and shout aga'n
Responsive to his call, with quivering peals,
And long halloos, and screams, and echoes loud
Redoubled and redoubled ; concourse wild
Of mirth and jocund din ! And, when it chanced

That pauses of deep silence mocked his skill,
 Then, sometimes, in that silence, while he hung
 Listening, a gentle shock of mild surprise
 Has carried far into his heart the voice
 Of mountain torrents ; or the visible scene
 Would enter unawares into his mind
 With all its solemn imagery, its rocks,
 Its woods, and that uncertain heaven, received
 Into the bosom of the steady lake.

This Boy was taken from his Mates, and died
 In childhood, ere he was ten years old.
 Fair are the woods, and beauteous is the spot,
 The Vale where he was born : the Church-yard hangs
 Upon a slope above the Village School,
 And there, along that bank, when I have passed
 At evening, I believe, that oftentimes
 A full half-hour together I have stood
 Mute—looking at the grave in which he lies.

THE

BROTHERS:

A PASTORAL POEM.

*The BROTHERS*.*

“ These Tourists, Heaven preserve us ! needs must live

A profitable life : some glance along,
Rapid and gay, as if the earth were air,
And they were butterflies to wheel about
Long as their summer lasted : some, as wise,
Upon the forehead of a jutting crag
Sit perched, with book and pencil on their knee,
And look and scribble, scribble on and look,
Until a man might travel twelve stout miles,
Or reap an acre of his neighbour's corn.

* This Poem was intended to be the concluding poem of a series of pastorals, the scene of which was laid among the mountains of Cumberland and Westmoreland. I mention this to apologize for the abruptness with which the poem begins.

But, for that moping Son of Idleness,
 Why can he tarry yonder?—In our church-yard
 Is neither epitaph nor monument,
 Tomb-stone nor name—only the turf we tread,
 And a few natural graves." To Jane, his wife,
 Thus spake the homely Priest of Ennerdale.
 It was a July evening; and he sate
 Upon the long stone-seat beneath the eaves
 Of his old cottage, as it chanced, that day,
 Employed in winter's work. Upon the stone
 His Wife sate near him, teasing matted wool,
 While, from the twin cards toothed with glittering wire,
 He fed the spindle of his youngest Child,
 Who turned her large round wheel in the open air
 With back and forward steps. Towards the field
 In which the Parish Chapel stood alone,
 Girt round with a bare ring of mossy wall,
 While half an hour went by, the Priest had sent
 Many a long look of wonder, and at last,
 Risen from his seat, beside the snow-white ridge

Of carded wool which the old man had piled
 He laid his implements with gentle care,
 Each in the other locked ; and, down the path
 Which from his cottage to the church-yard led,
 He took his way, impatient to accost
 The Stranger, whom he saw still lingering there.

'Twas one well known to him in former days,
 A Shepherd-lad : who ere his thirteenth year
 Had changed his calling, with the mariners
 A fellow-mariner, and so had fared
 Through twenty seasons ; but he had been reared
 Among the mountains, and he in his heart
 Was half a Shepherd on the stormy seas.
 Oft in the piping shrouds had Leonard heard
 The tones of waterfalls, and inland sounds
 Of caves and trees :—and, when the regular wind
 Between the tropics filled the steady sail,
 And blew with the same breath through days and weeks,

Lengthening invisibly its weary line
 Along the cloudless Main, he, in those hours
 Of tiresome indolence, would often hang
 Over the vessel's side, and gaze and gaze,
 And, while the broad green wave and sparkling foam

Flashed round him images and hues, that wrought
 In union with the employment of his heart,
 He, thus by feverish passion overcome,
 Even with the organs of his bodily eye,
 Below him, in the bosom of the deep,
 Saw mountains, saw the forms of sheep that grazed
 On verdant hills, with dwellings among trees,
 And shepherds clad in the same country gray
 Which he himself had worn*.

And now at length

From perils manifold, with some small wealth

* This description of the Calenture is sketched from an imperfect recollection of an admirable one in prose, by Mr. Gilbert, author of The Hurricane.

Acquired by traffic in the Indian Isles,
To his paternal home he is returned,
With a determined purpose to resume
The life which he lived there; both for the sake
Of many darling pleasures, and the love
Which to an only brother he has borne
In all his hardships, since that happy time
When, whether it blew foul or fair, they two
Were brother Shepherds on their native hills.
—They were the last of all their race: and now
When Leonard had approached his home, his heart
Failed in him; and, not venturing to inquire
Tidings of one whom he so dearly loved,
Towards the church-yard he had turned aside,
That, as he knew in what particular spot
His family were laid, he thence might learn
If still his Brother lived, or to the file
Another grave was added.—He had found
Another grave, near which a full half-hour
He had remained; but, as he gazed, there grew
Such a confusion in his memory,

That he began to doubt, and he had hopes
 That he had seen this heap of turf before,
 That it was not another grave, but one
 He had forgotten. He had lost his path,
 As up the vale he came that afternoon,
 Through fields which once had been well known to him.

And oh ! what joy the recollection now
 Sent to his heart ! He lifted up his eyes,
 And looking round he thought that he perceived
 Strange alteration wrought on every side
 Among the woods and fields, and that the rocks,
 And the eternal hills, themselves were changed.

By this the Priest, who down the field had come
 Unseen by Leonard, at the church-yard gate
 Stopped short, and thence, at leisure, limb by limb
 He scanned him with a gay complacency.
 Aye, thought the Vicar, smiling to himself,
 'Tis one of those who needs must leave the path
 Of the world's business to go wild alone :

His arms have a perpetual holiday ;
 The happy Man will creep about the fields
 Following his fancies by the hour, to bring
 Tears down his cheeks, or solitary smiles
 Into his face; until the setting sun
 Write Fool upon his forehead. Planted thus
 Beneath a shed that overarched the gate
 Of this rude church-yard, till the stars appeared
 The good man might have communed with himself,
 But that the stranger, who had left the grave,
 Approached ; he recognized the Priest at once,
 And, after greetings interchanged, and given
 By Leonard to the Vicar as to one
 Unknown to him, this dialogue ensued.

LEONARD.

You live, Sir, in these dales, a quiet life :
 Your years make up one peaceful family ;
 And who would grieve and fret, if, welcome come
 And welcome gone, they are so like each other,
 They cannot be remembered ? Scarce a funeral

Comes to this church-yard once in eighteen months;
 And yet, some changes must take place among you :
 And you, who dwell here, even among these rocks
 Can trace the finger of mortality,
 And see, that with our threescore years and ten
 We are not all that perish.—I remember,
 For many years ago I passed this road,
 There was a foot-way all along the fields
 By the brook-side—'tis gone—and that dark cleft!
 To me it does not seem to wear the face
 Which then it had.

PRIEST.

Why, Sir, for aught I know,
 That chasm is much the same—

LEONARD.

But, surely, yonder—

PRIEST.

Aye, there, indeed, your memory is a friend
 That does not play you false —On that tall pike
 (It is the loneliest place of all these hills)

There were two Springs which bubbled side by side,
 As if they had been made that they might be
 Companions for each other : ten years back,
 Close to those brother fountains, the huge crag
 Was rent with lightning—one is dead and gone,
 The other, left behind, is flowing still.—
 For accidents and changes such as these,
 Why, we have store of them ! a water-spout
 Will bring down half a mountain ; what a feast
 For folks that wander up and down like you
 To see an acre's breadth of that wide cliff
 One roaring cataract !—a sharp May storm
 Will come with loads of January snow,
 And in one night send twenty score of sheep
 To feed the ravens ; or a Shepherd dies
 By some untoward death among the rocks :
 The ice breaks up and sweeps away a bridge—
 A wood is felled :—and then for our own homes !
 A Child is born or christened, a Field ploughed,
 A Daughter sent to service, a Web spun,

The old House-clock is decked with a new face;
 And hence, so far from wanting facts or dates
 To chronicle the time, we all have here
 A pair of diaries, one serving, Sir,
 For the whole dale, and one for each fire-side—
 Yours was a stranger's judgment: for Historians,
 Commend me to these valleys.

LEONARD.

Yet your Church-yard
 Seems, if such freedom may be used with you,
 To say that you are heedless of the past.
 An orphan could not find his mother's grave:
 Here's neither head- nor foot-stone, plate of brass,
 Cross-bones or skull, type of our earthly state.
 Or emblem of our hopes: the dead man's home.
 Is but a fellow to that pasture-field.

PRIEST.

Why, there, Sir, is a thought that's new to me.
 The Stone-cutters, 'tis true, might beg their bread.
 If every English Church-yard were like ours;

Yet your conclusion wanders from the truth.
 We have no need of names and epitaphs ;
 We talk about the dead by our fire-sides,
 And then, for our immortal part ! we want
 No symbols, Sir, to tell us that plain tale :
 The thought of death sits easy on the man
 Who has been born and dies among the mountains.

LEONARD.

Your Dalesmen, then, do in each other's thoughts
 Possess a kind of second life : no doubt
 You, Sir, could help me to the history
 Of half those Graves ?

PETER.

For eight-score winters past,
 With what I've witnessed, and with what I've heard,
 Perhaps I might ; and, on a winter's evening,
 If you were seated at my chimney's nook,
 By turning o'er these hillocks one by one
 We two could travel, Sir, through a strange round,

Yet all in the broad high-way of the world.
 ' Now there's a grave—your foot is half upon it,
 It looks just like the rest ; and yet that Man
 Died broken-hearted.

LEONARD.

'Tis a common case.

We'll take another : who is he that lies
 Beneath yon ridge, the last of those three graves ?
 It touches on that piece of native rock
 Left in the church-yard wall.

PRIEST.

That's Walter Ewbank.

He had as white a head and fresh a cheek
 As ever were produced by youth and age
 Engendering in the blood of hale fourscore.
 For five long generations had the heart
 Of Walter's forefathers o'erflowed the bounds
 Of their inheritance, that single cottage,—
 You see it yonder !—and those few green fields.
 They toiled and wrought, and still, from Sire to Son,

Each struggled, and each yielded as before
 A little—yet a little—and old Walter,
 They left to him the family heart, and land
 With other burthens than the crop it bore.
 Year after year the old man still kept up
 A cheerful mind, and buffeted with bond,
 Interest and mortgages; at last he sank,
 And went into his grave before his time.
 Poor Walter! whether it was care that spurred him
 God only knows, but to the very last
 He had the lightest foot in Ennerdale:
 His pace was never that of an old man:
 I almost see him tripping down the path
 With his two Grandsons after him—but You,
 Unless our Landlord be your host to-night,
 Have far to travel, and in these rough paths
 Even in the longest day of midsummer—

LEONARD.

But these two Orphans!

PRIEST.

Orphans! Such they were—

Yet not while Walter lived—for, though their parents

Lay buried side by side as now they lie,
 The old Man was a father to the boys,
 Two fathers in one father : and if tears,
 Shed when he talked of them where they were not,
 And hauntings from the infirmity of love,
 Are aught of what makes up a mother's heart,
 This old Man in the day of his old age
 Was half a mother to them.—If you weep, Sir,
 To hear a Stranger talking about Strangers,
 Heaven bless you when you are among your kindred !

Aye. You may turn that way—it is a grave
 Which will bear looking at.

LEONARD.

These Boys—I hope .
 They loved this good old Man ?—

PRIEST.

'They did—and truly :
 But that was what we almost overlooked,

They were such darlings of each other. For Though from their cradles they had lived with Walter,

The only Kinsman near them in the house,
 Yet he being old, they had much love to spare,
 And it all went into each other's hearts.

Leonard, the elder by just eighteen months,
 Was two years taller : 'twas a joy to see,
 To hear, to meet them ! from their house the School
 Was distant three short miles—and in the time
 Of storm and thaw, when every water-course
 And unbridged stream, such as you may have noticed

Crossing our roads at every hundred steps,
 Was swoln into a noisy rivulet,
 Would Leonard then, when elder boys perhaps
 Remained at home, go staggering through the fords
 Bearing his Brother on his back. I've seen him,
 On windy days, in one of those stray brooks,
 Aye, more than once I've seen him mid-leg deep,

Their two books lying both on a dry stone
 Upon the hither side : and once I said,
 As I remember, looking round these rocks
 And hills on which we all of us were born,
 That God who made the great book of the world
 Would bless such piety—

LEONARD.

It may be then—

PRIEST.

Never did worthier lads break English bread !
 The finest Sunday that the Autumn saw,
 With all its mealy clusters of ripe nuts,
 Could never keep these boys away from church,
 Or tempt them to an hour of sabbath breach.
 Leonard and James ! I warrant, every corner
 Among these rocks, and every hollow place
 Where foot could come, to one or both of them
 Was known as well as to the flowers that grow there.

Like Roe-bucks they went bounding o'er the hills :

They played like two young Ravens on the crags :
 Then they could write, aye and speak too, as well
 As many of their betters—and for Leonard !
 The very night before he went away,
 In my own house I put into his hand
 A Bible, and I'd wager twenty pounds,
 That, if he is alive, he has it yet.

LEONARD.

It seems, these Brothers have not lived to be
 A comfort to each other.—

PRIEST.

That they might
 Live to that end, is what both old and young
 In this our valley all of us have wished,
 And what, for my part, I have often prayed :
 But Leonard—

LEONARD.

Then James still is left among you ?

PRIEST.

'Tis of the elder Brother I am speaking :

They had an Uncle, he was at that time
 A thriving man, and trafficked on the seas :
 And, but for this same Uncle, to this hour
 Leonard had never handled rope or shroud.
 For the Boy loved the life which we lead here ;
 And, though a very Stripling, twelve years old,
 His soul was knit to this his native soil.
 But, as I said, old Walter was too weak
 To strive with such a torrent ; when he died,
 The Estate and House were sold, and all their Sheep,
 A pretty flock, and which, for aught I know,
 Had clothed the Ewbanks for a thousand years.
 Well—all was gone, and they were destitute.
 And Leonard, chiefly for his Brother's sake,
 Resolved to try his fortune on the seas.
 'Tis now twelve years since we had tidings from him.

If there was one among us who had heard
 That Leonard Ewbank was come home again,

From the great Gavel*, down by Leeza's Banks,
 And down the Enna, far as Egremont,
 The day would be a very festival,
 And those two bells of ours, which there you see
 Hanging in the open air—but, O good Sir!
 This is sad talk—they'll never sound for him
 Living or dead.—When last we heard of him
 He was in slavery among the Moors
 Upon the Barbary Coast.—'Twas not a little
 That would bring down his spirit, and, no doubt,
 Before it ended in his death, the Lad
 Was sadly crossed--Poor Leonard! when we parted,

* The Great Gavel, so called, I imagine, from its resemblance to the Gable end of a house, is one of the highest of the Cumberland mountains. It stands at the head of the several vales of Ennerdale, Wastdale, and Borrowdale.

The Leeza is a river which flows into the Lake of Ennerdale: on issuing from the Lake, it changes its name, and is called the End, Eyne, or Enna. It falls into the sea a little below Egremont.

He took me by the hand and said to me,
 If ever the day came when he was rich,
 He would return, and on his Father's Land
 He would grow old among us.

LEONARD.

If that day
 Should come, 'twould needs be a glad day for him;
 He would himself, no doubt, be happy then
 As any that should meet him—

PRIEST.

Happy! Sir—

LEONARD.

You said his kindred all were in their graves,
 And that he had one Brother—

PRIEST.

That is but
 A fellow tale of sorrow. From his youth
 James, though not sickly, yet was delicate;
 And Leonard being always by his side

Had done so many offices about him,
 That, though he was not of a timid nature,
 Yet still the spirit of a Mountain Boy
 In him was somewhat checked; and, when his Brother
 Was gone to sea and he was left alone,
 The little colour that he had was soon
 Stolen from his cheek, he drooped, and pined and pined—

LEONARD.

But these are all the graves of full-grown men!

PRIEST.

Aye, Sir, that passed away : we took him to us.
 He was the Child of all the dale—he lived
 Three months with one, and six months with another;
 And wanted neither food, nor clothes, nor love :
 And many, many happy days were his.
 But, whether blithe or sad, 'tis my belief
 His absent Brother still was at his heart.

And, when he lived beneath our roof, we found
 (A practice till this time unknown to him)
 That often, rising from his bed at night,
 He in his sleep would walk about, and sleeping
 He sought his Brother Leonard.—You are moved!
 Forgive me, Sir : before I spoke to you,
 I judged you most unkindly.

LEONARD.

But this Youth,
 How did he die at last ?

PRIEST.

One sweet May morning,
 It will be twelve years since, when Spring returns,
 He had gone forth among the new-dropped lambs,
 With two or three Companions whom it chanced
 Some further business summoned to a house
 Which stands at the Dale-head. James, tired perhaps,
 Or from some other cause, remained behind.
 You see yon Precipice—it almost looks

Like some vast building made of many crags ;
And in the midst is one particular rock
That rises like a column from the vale,
Whence by our shepherds it is called the Pillar.
James pointed to its summit, over which
They all had purposed to return together,
And told them that he there would wait for them :
They parted, and his Comrades passed that way
Some two hours after, but they did not find him
Upon the Pillar—at the appointed place.
Of this they took no heed : but one of them,
Going by chance, at night, into the house
Which at that time was James's home, there learned
That nobody had seen him all that day :
The morning came, and still, he was unheard of :
The neighbours were alarmed, and to the Brook
Some went, and some towards the Lake : ere noon
They found him at the foot of that same Rock—
Dead, and with mangled limbs. The third day after
I buried him, poor Lad, and there he lies.

LEONARD.

And that then is his grave?—Before his death
You said that he saw many happy years?

PRIEST.

Aye, that he did—

LEONARD.

And all went well with him—

PRIEST.

If he had one, the Lad had twenty homes.

LEONARD.

And you believe, then, that his mind was easy—

PRIEST.

Yes, long before he died, he found that time
Is a true friend to sorrow; and unless
His thoughts were turned on Leonard's luckless fortune,

He talked about him with a cheerful love.

LEONARD.

He could not come to an unhallowed end!

PRIEST.

Nay, God forbid ! You recollect I mentioned
A habit which disquietude and grief
Had brought upon him ; and we all conjectured
That, as the day was warm, he had lain down
Upon the grass, and, waiting for his comrades,
He there had fallen asleep ; that in his sleep
He to the margin of the precipice
Had walked, and from the summit had fallen headlong.

And so no doubt he perished : at the time,
We guess, that in his hands he must have had
His Shepherd's staff ; for midway in the cliff
It had been caught ; and there for many years
It hung—and mouldered there.

The Priest here ended—

The Stranger would have thanked him, but he felt
Tears rushing in. Both left the spot in silence ;
And Leonard, when they reached the church-yard gate,

As the Priest lifted up the latch, turned round,
 And, looking at the grave, he said, "My Brother."
 The Vicar did not hear the words : and now,
 Pointing towards the Cottage, he entreated
 That Leonard would partake his homely fare :
 The other thanked him with a fervent voice,
 But added, that, the evening being calm,
 He would pursue his journey. So they parted.

It was not long ere Leonard reached a grove
 That overhung the road : he there stopped short,
 And, sitting down beneath the trees, reviewed
 All that the Priest had said : his early years
 Were with him in his heart : his cherished hopes,
 And thoughts which had been his an hour before,
 All pressed on him with such a weight, that now,
 This vale, where he had been so happy, seemed
 A place in which he could not bear to live :
 So he relinquished all his purposes.
 He travelled on to Egremont : and thence,

That night, he wrote a letter to the Priest
Reminding him of what had passed between them;
And adding, with a hope to be forgiven,
That it was from the weakness of his heart
He had not dared to tell him who he was.

This done, he went on shipboard, and is now
A Seaman, a gray-headed Mariner.

*ELLEN IRWIN,Or The BRAES of KIRTLE*.*

---

Fair Ellen Irwin, when she sate
Upon the Braes of Kirtle,
Was lovely as a Grecian Maid
Adorned with wreaths of myrtle.
Young Adam Bruce beside her lay ;
And there did they beguile the day
With love and gentle speeches,
Beneath the budding beeches.

* The Kirtle is a river in the Southern part of Scotland, on the banks of which the events here related took place.

From many Knights and many Squires
The Bruce had been selected ;
And Gordon, fairest of them all,
By Ellen was rejected.
Sad tidings to that noble Youth !
For it may be proclaimed with truth,
If Bruce hath loved sincerely,
The Gordon loves as dearly.

But what is Gordon's beauteous face ?
And what are Gordon's crosses
To them who sit by Kirtle's Braes
Upon the verdant mosses ?
Alas that ever he was born !
The Gordon, couched behind a thorn,
Sees them and their caressing,
Beholds them blest and blessing.

Proud Gordon cannot bear the thoughts
That through his brain are travelling,
And, starting up, to Bruce's heart
He lanced a deadly javelin !
Fair Ellen saw it when it came,
And, stepping forth to meet the same,
Did with her body cover
The Youth her chosen lover.

And, falling into Bruce's arms,
Thus died the beauteous Ellen,
Thus from the heart of her true-love
The mortal spear repelling.
And Bruce, as soon as he had slain
The Gordon, sailed away to Spain;
And fought with rage incessant
Against the Moorish Crescent.

But many days, and many months,
 And many years ensuing,
 This wretched Knight did vainly seek
 The death that he was wooing :
 And coming back across the wave,
 Without a groan on Ellen's grave
 His body he extended,
 And there his sorrow ended.

Now ye, who willingly have heard
 The tale I have been telling,
 May in Kirkconnel church-yard view
 The grave of lovely Ellen :
 By Ellen's side the Bruce is laid ;
 And, for the stone upon his head,
 May no rude hand deface it,
 And its forlorn HIC JACET !

Strange fits of passion I have known :
And I will dare to tell,
But in the Lover's ear alone,
What once to me befel.

When she I loved, was strong and gay
And like a rose in June,
I to her cottage bent my way,
Beneath the evening Moon.

Upon the Moon I fixed my eye,
All over the wide lea :
My Horse trudged on—and we drew nigh
Those paths so dear to me.

And now we reached the orchard plot;
 And, as we climbed the hill,
 Towards the roof of Lucy's cot
 The Moon descended still.

In one of those sweet dreams I slept,
 Kind Nature's gentlest boon!
 And, all the while, my eyes I kept
 On the descending Moon.

My Horse moved on; hoof after hoof
 He raised, and never stopped:
 When down behind the cottage roof
 At once the Planet dropped.

What fond and wayward thoughts will slide
 Into a Lover's head—
 "O mercy!" to myself I cried,
 "If Lucy should be dead!"

---

She dwelt among th' untrodden ways
Beside the springs of Dove,
A Maid whom there were none to praise,
And very few to love.

A Violet by a mossy stone
Half-hidden from the eye !
—Fair as a star, when only one
Is shining in the sky.

She lived unknown, and few could know
When Lucy ceased to be ;
But she is in her Grave, and oh !
The difference to me.

A slumber did my spirit seal ;
I had no human fears :
She seemed a thing that could not feel
The touch of earthly years.

No motion has she now, no force ;
She neither hears nor sees,
Rolled round in earth's diurnal course
With rocks and stones and trees !

AND

---

" Begone, thou fond presumptuous Elf,"
Exclaimed a thundering Voice,
" Nor dare to thrust thy foolish self Between me and my choice!"
A falling Water swoln with snows
Thus spake to a poor Briar-rose,
That, all bespattered with his foam,
And dancing high, and dancing low,
Was living, as a child might know,
In an unhappy home.

"Dost thou presume my course to block ?

Off, off! or, puny Thing!

I'll hurl thee headlong with the rock

To which thy fibres cling."

The Flood was tyrannous and strong ;

The patient Briar suffered long,

Nor did he utter groan or sigh,

Hoping the danger would be past :

But seeing no relief, at last

He ventured to reply.

"Ah!" said the Briar, "blame me not;

Why should we dwell in strife ?

We who in this, our natal spot,

Once lived a happy life !

You stirred me on my rocky bed—

What pleasure through my veins you spread !

The Summer long from day to day

My leaves you freshened and bedewed ;

Nor was it common gratitude

That did your cares repay.

" When Spring came on with bud and bell,
 Among these rocks did I
 Before you hang my wreath, to tell
 That gentle days were nigh !
 And in the sultry summer hours
 I sheltered you with leaves and flowers ;
 And in my leaves, now shed and gone,
 The Linnet lodged, and for us two
 Chanted his pretty songs, when You
 Had little voice or none.

" But now proud-thoughts are in your breast—
 What grief is mine you see,
 Ah ! would you think, even yet how blest
 Together we might be !
 Though of both leaf and flower bereft,
 Some ornaments to me are left—
 Rich store of scarlet hips is mine,
 With which I in my humble way
 Would deck you many a winter's day,
 A happy Eglantine !"

What more he said I cannot tell.
The stream came thundering down the dell,
And galloped loud and fast;
I listened, nor aught else could hear,
The Briar quaked—and much I fear,
Those accents were his last.

The OAK and the BROOM,A PASTORAL.

His simple truths did Andrew glean
Beside the babbling rills ;
A careful student he had been
Among the woods and hills.
One winter's night, when through the Trees
The wind was thundering, on his knees
His youngest born did Andrew hold :
And while the rest, a ruddy quire,
Were seated round their blazing fire,
This Tale the Shepherd told.

I saw a crag, a lofty stone
 As ever tempest beat !
 Out of its head an Oak had grown,
 A Broom out of its feet.
 The time was March, a cheerful noon—
 The thaw-wind with the breath of June
 Breathed gently from the warm South-west ;
 When, in a voice sedate with age,
 This Oak, half giant and half sage,
 His neighbour thus addressed :

" Eight weary weeks, through rock and clay,
 Along this mountain's edge
 The Frost hath wrought both night and day,
 Wedge driving after wedge.
 Look up ! and think, above your head
 What trouble surely will be bred ;
 Last night I heard a crash—'tis true,
 The splinters took another road—
 I see them yonder—what a load
 For such a Thing as you !

" You are preparing as before
 To deck your slender shape ;
 And yet, just three years back—no more—
 You had a strange escape.
 Down from yon Cliff a fragment broke,
 It came, you know, with fire and smoke
 And hitherward it bent its way.
 This pond'rous Block was caught by me,
 And o'er your head, as you may see,
 'Tis hanging to this day !

" The Thing had better been asleep,
 Whatever thing it were,
 Or Breeze, or Bird, or Dog, or Sheep,
 That first did plant you there.
 For you and your green twigs decoy
 The little witless Shepherd-boy
 To come and slumber in your bower ;
 And, trust me, on some sultry noon,
 Both you and he, Heaven knows how soon !
 Will perish in one hour.

" From me this friendly warning take"—

The Broom began to doze,

And thus to keep herself awake

Did gently interpose :

" My thanks for your discourse are due ;

That it is true, and more than true,

I know, and I have known it long ;

Frail is the bond, by which we hold

Our being, be we young or old,

Wise, foolish, weak or strong.

" Disasters, do the best we can,

Will reach both great and small ;

And he is oft the wisest man,

Who is not wise at all.

For me, why should I wish to roam ?

This spot is my paternal home,

It is my pleasant Heritage ;

My Father many a happy year

Here spread his careless blossoms, here

Attained a good old age.

" Even such as his may be my lot.
 What cause have I to haunt
 My heart with terrors ? Am I not
 In truth a favoured plant !
 The Spring for me a garland weaves
 Of yellow flowers and verdant leaves ;
 And, when the Frost is in the sky,
 My branches are so fresh and gay
 That You might look at me and say,
 This Plant can never die.

" The Butterfly, all green and gold,
 To me hath often flown,
 Here in my Blossoms to behold
 Wings lovely as his own.
 When grass is chill with rain or dew,
 Beneath my shade the mother Ewe
 Lies with her infant Lamb ; I see
 The love they to each other make,
 And the sweet joy, which they partake,
 It is a joy to me."

Her voice was blithe, her heart was light ;
The Broom might have pursued
Her speech, until the stars of night
Their journey had renewed.
But in the branches of the Oak
Two Ravens now began to croak
Their nuptial song, a gladsome air ;
And to her own green bower the breeze
That instant brought two stripling Bees
To feed and murmur there.

One night the Wind came from the North
And blew a furious blast ;
At break of day I ventured forth,
And near the Cliff I passed.
The storm had fallen upon the Oak
And struck him with a mighty stroke,
And whirled and whirled him far away ;
And in one hospitable Cleft
The little careless Broom was left
To live for many a day.

THE COMPLAINT

OF A FORSAKEN

INDIAN WOMAN.

---

[When a Northern Indian, from sickness, is unable to continue his journey with his companions, he is left behind, covered over with Deer-skins; and is supplied with water, food, and fuel, if the situation of the place will afford it. He is informed of the track which his companions intend to pursue, and if he is unable to follow, or overtake them, he perishes alone in the Desert; unless he should have the good fortune to fall in with some other Tribes of Indians. The females are equally, or still more, exposed to the same fate. See that very interesting work, Hearne's Journey from Hudson's Bay to the Northern Ocean. In the high Northern Latitudes, as the same writer informs us, when the Northern Lights vary their position in the air, they make a rustling and a crackling noise. This circumstance is alluded to in the first stanza of the following poem.]

Before I see another day,
Oh let my body die away !
In sleep I heard the northern gleams ;
The stars they were among my dreams ;
In sleep did I behold the skies,
I saw the crackling flashes drive ;
And yet they are upon my eyes,
And yet I am alive.
Before I see another day,
Oh let my body die away !

My fire is dead : it knew no pain ;
Yet is it dead, and I remain.
All stiff with ice the ashes lie ;
And they are dead, and I will die.
When I was well, I wished to live,
For clothes, for warmth, for food, and fire ;
But they to me no joy can give,
No pleasure now, and no desire.
Then here contented will I lie !
Alone I cannot fear to die.

Alas ! you might have dragged me on Another day, a single one !
Too soon despair o'er me prevailed ;
Too soon my heartless spirit failed ;
When you were gone my limbs were stronger ;
And oh how grievously I rue,
That, afterwards, a little longer,
My Friends, I did not follow you !
For strong and without pain I lay,
My Friends, when you were gone away.

My Child ! they gave thee to another,
 A woman who was not thy mother.
 When from my arms my Babe they took,
 On me how strangely did he look !
 Through his whole body something ran,
 A most strange something did I see ;
 —As if he strove to be a man,
 That he might pull the sledge for me.
 And then he stretched his arms, how wild !
 Oh mercy ! like a little child.

My little joy ! my little pride !
 In two days more I must have died.
 Then do not weep and grieve for me ;
 I feel I must have died with thee.
 Oh wind, that o'er my head art flying
 The way my Friends their course did bend,
 I should not feel the pain of dying,
 Could I with thee a message send !
 Too soon, my Friends, you went away ;
 For I had many things to say.

I'll follow you across the snow ;
You travel heavily and slow :
In spite of all my weary pain,
I'll look upon your tents again.
—My fire is dead, and snowy white
The water which beside it stood ;
The wolf has come to me to-night,
And he has stolen away my food.
For ever left alone am I,
Then wherefore should I fear to die ?

My journey will be shortly run,
I shall not see another sun ;
I cannot lift my limbs to know
If they have any life or no.
My poor forsaken child ! if I
For once could have thee close to me,
With happy heart I then should die,
And my last thoughts would happy be.
I feel my body die away,
I shall not see another day.

LUCY GRAY.

---

Oft I had heard of Lucy Gray :
And, when I crossed the Wild,
I chanced to see at break of day
The solitary Child.

No Mate, no comrade Lucy knew ;
She dwelt on a wide Moor,
—The sweetest thing that ever grew
Beside a human door !
Within

You yet may spy the Fawn at play,
The Hare upon the Green ;
But the sweet face of Lucy Gray
Will never more be seen.

“ To-night will be a stormy night—
 You to the Town must go ;
 And take a lantern, Child, to light
 Your Mother through the snow.”

“ That, Father ! will I gladly do ;
 ’Tis scarcely afternoon—
 The Minster-clock has just struck two,
 And yonder is the Moon.”

At this the Father raised his hook
 And snapped a faggot-band ;
 He plied his work, and Lucy took
 The lantern in her hand.

Not blither is the mountain roe :
 With many a wanton stroke
 Her feet disperse the powdery snow,
 That rises up like smoke.

The storm came on before its time ;
 She wandered up and down ;
 And many a hill did Lucy climb,
 But never reached the Town.

The wretched Parents all that night
 Went shouting far and wide ;
 But there was neither sound nor sight
 To serve them for a guide.

At day-break on a hill they stood
 That overlooked the Moor ;
 And thence they saw the Bridge of wood,
 A furlong from their door.

And now they homeward turned, and cried
 " In Heaven we all shall meet !"
 —When in the snow the Mother spied
 The print of Lucy's feet.

Then downward from the steep hill's edge
They tracked the footmarks small ;
And through the broken hawthorn-hedge,
And by the long stone-wall :

And then an open field they crossed :
The marks were still the same ;
They tracked them on, nor ever lost ;
And to the Bridge they came.

They followed from the snowy bank
The footmarks, one by one,
Into the middle of the plank ;
And further there was none.

—Yet some maintain that to this day
She is a living Child ;
That you may see sweet Lucy Gray
Upon the lonesome Wild.

O'er rough and smooth she trips along,
And never looks behind ;
And sings a solitary song
That whistles in the wind.

---

'Tis said, that some have died for love :
And here and there a church-yard grave is found
In the cold North's unhallowed ground,
Because the wretched Man himself had slain,
His love was such a grievous pain.
And there is one whom I five years have known;
He dwells alone
Upon Helvellyn's side :
He loved——the pretty Barbara died,
And thus he makes his moan :
Three years had Barbara in her grave been laid
When thus his moan he made :

"Oh move, thou Cottage, from behind that oak !
 Or let the aged tree uprooted lie,
 That in some other way yon smoke
 May mount into the sky !
 The clouds pass on ; they from the heavens depart :
 I look—the sky is empty space ;
 I know not what I trace ;
 But, when I cease to look, my hand is on my heart.

"O ! what a weight is in these shades ! Ye leaves,
 When will that dying murmur be suppress ?
 Your sound my heart of peace bereaves,
 It robs my heart of rest.
 Thou Thrush, that singest loud and loud and free,
 Into yon row of willows flit,
 Upon that alder sit ;
 Or sing another song, or choose another tree.

"Roll back, sweet Rill ! back to thy mountain bounds,
 And there for ever be thy waters chained !
 For thou dost haunt the air with sounds
 That cannot be sustained ;
 If still beneath that pine-tree's ragged bough
 Headlong yon waterfall must come,
 Oh let it then be dumb !—
 Be any thing, sweet Rill, but that which thou art now.

" Thou Eglantine, whose arch so proudly towers,
 (Even like the rainbow spanning half the vale)
 Thou one fair shrub, oh ! shed thy flowers,
 And stir not in the gale.
 For thus to see thee nodding in the air,
 To see thy arch thus stretch and bend,
 Thus rise and thus descend,
 Disturbs me, till the sight is more than I can bear."

The Man who makes this feverish complaint
Is one of giant stature, who could dance
Equipped from head to foot in iron mail.
Ah gentle Love! if ever thought was thine
To store up kindred hours for me, thy face
Turn from me, gentle Love! nor let me walk
Within the sound of Emma's voice, or know
Such happiness as I have known today.

IDLE SHEPHERD-BOYS, OR,

A PASTORAL.

---

I.

The valley rings with mirth and joy ;
 Among the hills the Echoes play
 A never never ending song
 To welcome in the May.
 The Magpie chatters with delight ;

* Gill in the dialect of Cumberland and Westmoreland is a short, and, for the most part, a steep narrow valley, with a stream running through it. Force is the word universally employed in these dialects for Waterfall.

The mountain Raven's youngling Brood
 Have left the Mother and the Nest ;
 And they go rambling east and west
 In search of their own food ;
 Or through the glittering Vapors dart
 In very wantonness of heart:

II.

Beneath a rock, upon the grass,
 Two Boys are sitting in the sun ;
 It seems they have no work to do,
 Or that their work is done. }
 On pipes of sycamore they play
 The fragments of a Christmas Hymn ;
 Or with that plant which in our dale
 We call Stag-horn, or Fox's Tail,
 Their rusty Hats they trim :
 And thus, as happy as the Day,
 Those Shepherds wear the time away.

III.

Along the river's stony marge
The Sand-lark chants a joyous song ;
The Thrush is busy in the wood,
And carols loud and strong.
A thousand Lambs are on the rocks,
All newly born ! both earth and sky
Keep jubilee ; and more than all,
Those Boys with their green Coronals ;
They never hear the cry,
That plaintive cry ! which up the hill
Comes from the depth of Dungeon-Gill.

IV.

Said Walter, leaping from the ground,
“ Down to the stump of yon old yew
We'll for our Whistles run a race.”
——Away the Shepherds flew.
They leapt—they ran—and when they came

Right opposite to Dungeon-Gill,
 Seeing that he should lose the prize,
 "Stop!" to his comrade Walter cries—
 James stopped with no good will :
 Said Walter then, "Your task is here,
 'Twill keep you working half a year.

V.

"Now cross where I shall cross—come on,
 And follow me where I shall lead"—
 The other took him at his word,
 But did not like the deed.
 It was a spot, which you may see
 If ever you to Langdale go :
 Into a chasm a mighty Block
 Hath fallen, and made a Bridge of rock ;
 The gulph is deep below ;
 And in a bason black and small
 Receives a lofty Waterfall.

VI.

With staff in hand across the cleft
The Challenger began his march ;
And now, all eyes and feet, hath gained
The middle of the arch.

When list ! he hears a piteous moan—

Again !—his heart within him dies—

His pulse is stopped, his breath is lost,

He totters, pale as any ghost,

And, looking down, he spies

A Lamb, that in the pool is pent

Within that black and frightful Rent,

VII.

The Lamb had slipped into the stream,

And safe without a bruise or wound

The Cataract had borne him down

Into the gulph profound.

His Dam had seen him when he fell,

She saw him down the torrent borne ;
 And, while with all a mother's love
 She from the lofty rocks above
 Sent forth a cry forlorn,
 The Lamb, still swimming round and round,
 Made answer to that plaintive sound.

VIII.

When he had learnt what thing it was,
 That sent this rueful cry ; I ween,
 The Boy recovered heart, and told
 The sight which he had seen.
 Both gladly now deferred their task ;
 Nor was there wanting other aid—
 A Poet, one who loves the brooks
 Far better than the sages' books,
 By chance had thither strayed ;
 And there the helpless Lamb he found
 By those huge rocks encompassed round.

IX.

He drew it gently from the pool,
And brought it forth into the light :
The Shepherds met him with his Charge,
An unexpected sight !
Into their arms the Lamb they took,
Said they, " He's neither maimed nor scarred." ;
Then up the steep ascent they hied,
And placed him at his Mother's side ;
~~And~~ gently did the Bard
Those idle Shepherd-boys upbraid,
~~And~~ bade them better mind their trade,

POOR SUSAN.

At the corner of Wood-street, when day-light appears,
There's a Thrush that sings loud, it has sung for three years :

Poor Susan has passed by the spot, and has heard
In the silence of morning the song of the Bird.

'Tis a note of enchantment ; what ails her ? She sees
A mountain ascending, a vision of trees ;
Bright volumes of vapour through Lothbury glide,
And a river flows on through the vale of Cheapside.

Green pastures she views in the midst of the dale,
Down which she so often has tripped with her pail ;
And a single small cottage, a nest like a dove's,
The one only Dwelling on earth that she loves.

She looks, and her Heart is in heaven: but they fade,
The mist and the river, the hill and the shade;
The stream will not flow, and the hill will not rise,
And the colours have all passed away from her eyes.

INSCRIPTION

For the Spot where the HERMITAGE stood on St. Herbert's Island, Derwent-Water,

---

If Thou in the dear love of some one Friend
Hast been so happy, that thou know'st what thoughts

Will, sometimes, in the happiness of love—
Make the heart sick, then wilt thou reverence
This quiet spot.—St. Herbert hither came,
And here, for many seasons, from the world
Removed, and the affections of the world,
He dwelt in solitude.—But he had left
A Fellow-labourer, whom the good Man loved
As his own soul. And, when within his cave
Alone he knelt before the crucifix
While o'er the Lake the cataract of Lodore

Pealed to his orisons, and when he paced
Along the beach of this small isle and thought
Of his Companion, he would pray that both
Might die in the same moment. Nor in vain
So prayed he :—as our Chronicles report,
Though here the Hermit numbered his last days,
Far from St. Cuthbert his beloved Friend,
Those holy Men both died in the same hour.

LINES

Written with a pencil upon a stone in the wall of the House (an Out-house) on the Island at Grasmere.

---

Rude is this Edifice, and Thou hast seen
Buildings, albeit rude, that have maintained
Proportions more harmonious, and approached
To somewhat of a closer fellowship
With the ideal grace. Yet as it is
Do take it in good part; for he, the poor
Vitruvius of our village, had no help
From the great City; never on the leaves
Of red Morocco folio saw displayed
The skeletons and pre-existing ghosts
Of Beauties yet unborn, the rustic Box,
Snug Cot, with Coach-house, Shed and Hermitage.
It is a homely Pile, yet to these walls

The heifer comes in the snow-storm, and here
 The new-dropped lamb finds shelter from the wind.
 And hither does one Poet sometimes row
 His Pinnacle, a small vagrant Barge, up-piled
 With plenteous store of heath and withered fern,
 (A lading which he with his sickle cuts
 Among the mountains,) and beneath this roof
 He makes his summer couch, and here at noon
 Spreads out his limbs, while, yet unshorn, the Sheep
 Panting beneath the burthen of their wool
 Lie round him, even as if they were a part
 Of his own Household : nor, while from his bed
 He through that door-place looks toward the lake
 And to the stirring breezes, does he want
 Creation* lovely as the work of sleep;
 Fair sights, and visions of romantic joy.

To a SEXTON.

Let thy wheel-barrow alone.
Wherefore, Sexton, piling still
In thy Bone-house bone on bone ?
'Tis already like a hill
In a field of battle made,
Where three thousand skulls are laid.
—These died in peace each with the other,
Father, Sister, Friend, and Brother.

Mark the spot to which I point !
From this platform eight feet square
Take not even a finger-joint :
Andrew's whole fire-side is there.

Here, alone, before thine eyes,
 Simon's sickly Daughter lies,
 From weakness, now, and pain defended,
 Whom he twenty winters tended.

Look but at the gardener's pride—
 How he glories, when he sees
 Roses, Lilies, side by side,
 Violets in families !
 By the heart of Man, his tears,
 By his hopes and by his fears,
 Thou, old Gray-beard ! art the Warden
 Of a far superior garden.

Thus then, each to other dear,
 Let them all in quiet lie,
 Andrew there and Susan here,
 Neighbours in mortality.

And, should I live through sun and rain
Seven widowed years without my Jane,
O Sexton, do not then remove her,
Let one grave hold the Lov'd and Lover!

ANDREW JONES.

" I hate that Andrew Jones : he'll breed
His children up to waste and pillage.
I wish the press-gang or the drum
With its tantara sound, would come
And sweep him from the village !"

I said not this, because he loves
Through the long day to swear and tittle ;
But for the poor dear sake of one
To whom a foul deed he had done,
A friendless Man, a travelling Cripple.

For this poor crawling helpless wretch
 Some Horseman who was passing by
 A penny on the ground had thrown ;
 But the poor Cripple was alone,
 And could not stoop—no help was nigh.

Inch-thick the dust lay on the ground,
 For it had long been droughty weather :
 So with his staff the Cripple wrought
 Among the dust till he had brought
 The halfpennies together.

It chanced that Andrew passed that way
 Just at the time ; and there he found
 The Cripple in the mid-day heat
 Standing alone, and at his feet
 He saw the penny on the ground.

He stooped and took the penny up :
And when the Cripple nearer drew,
Quoth Andrew, " Under half-a-crown,
What a man finds is all his own,
And so, my friend, good day to you."

And hence I said, that Andrew's boys
Will all be trained to waste and pillage ;
And wished the press-gang, or the drum
With its tantara sound, would come
And sweep him from the village !

R U T H.

R U T H.

---

When Ruth was left half desolate
Her Father took another Mate ;
And Ruth, not seven years old,
A slighted Child, at her own will
Went wandering over dale and hill,
In thoughtless freedom bold.

And she had made a Pipe of straw,
And from that oaten Pipe could draw
All sounds of winds and floods ;
Had built a Bower upon the green,
As if she from her birth had been
An Infant of the woods,

Beneath her Father's roof, alone
She seemed to live; her thoughts her own;
Herself her own delight:
Pleased with herself, nor sad nor gay,
She passed her time; and in this way
Grew up to Woman's height.

There came a Youth from Georgia's shore—
A military Casque he wore
With splendid feathers drest;
He brought them from the Cherokees;
The feathers nodded in the breeze,
And made a gallant crest.

From Indian blood you deem him sprung:
Ah no! he spake the English tongue,
And bore a Soldier's name;
And, when America was free
From battle and from jeopardy,
He 'cross the ocean came.

With hues of genius on his cheek
In finest tones the Youth could speak.
—While he was yet a Boy.
The moon, the glory of the sun,
And streams that murmur as they run,
Had been his dearest joy.

He was a lovely Youth ! I guess
The panther in the wilderness
Was not so fair as he ;
And when he chose to sport and play,
No dolphin ever was so gay
Upon the tropic sea.

Among the Indians he had fought ;
And with him many tales he brought
Of pleasure and of fear ;
Such tales as, told to any Maid
By such a Youth, in the green shade,
Were perilous to hear.

He told of Girls, a happy rout !
 Who quit their fold with dance and shout,
 Their pleasant Indian Town
 To gather strawberries all day long,
 Returning with a choral song
 When day-light is gone down.

He spake of plants divine and strange
 That every hour their blossoms change,
 Ten thousand lovely hues !
 With budding, fading, faded flowers
 They stand the wonder of the bowers
 From morn to evening dews.

Of march and ambush, siege and fight,
 Then did he tell, and with delight
 The heart of Ruth would ache ;
 Wild histories they were, and dear :
 But 'twas a thing of heaven to hear
 When of himself he spake !

Sometimes most earnestly he said;
 " O Ruth ! I have been worse than dead :
 False thoughts; thoughts bold and vain,
 Encompassed me on every side:
 When I, in confidence and pride,
 Had crossed the Atlantic Main.

" It was a fresh and glorious world;
 A banner bright that was unfurled
 Before me suddenly :
 I looked upon those hills and plains,
 And seemed as if let loose from chains
 To live at liberty.

" But wherefore speak of this ? for now,
 Sweet Ruth ! with thee, I know not how,
 I feel my spirit burn—
 Even as the east when day comes forth ;
 And to the west, and south, and north,
 The morning doth return.

" It is a purer, better mind:
 O Maiden innocent and kind,
 What sights I might have seen !"
 Even now upon my eyes they break !
 —And he again began to speak
 Of Lands where he had been.

He told of the Magnolia*, spread
 High as a cloud, high over head !
 The Cypress and her spire,
 —Of flowers† that with one scarlet gleam
 Cover a hundred leagues, and seem
 To set the hills on fire.

* Magnolia grandiflora.

† The splendid appearance of these scarlet flowers, which are scattered with such profusion over the Hills in the Southern parts of North America, is frequently mentioned by Bartram in his Travels.

The Youth of green savannahs spake,
And many an endless, endless lake,
With all its fairy crowds
Of islands, that together lie
As quietly as spots of sky
Among the evening clouds.

And then he said "How sweet it were
A fisher or a hunter there,
A gardener in the shade,
Still wandering with an easy mind
To build a household fire, and find
A home in every glade !

"What days and what sweet years ! Ah me !
Our life were life indeed, with thee
So passed in quiet bliss,
And all the while," said he, "to know
That we were in a world of woe,
On such an earth as this !"

And then he sometimes interwove
 Dear thoughts about a Father's love,
 "For there," said he, "are spun
 Around the heart such tender ties,
 That our own children to our eyes
 Are dearer than the sun.

"Sweet Ruth! and could you go with me
 My helpmate in the woods to be,
 Our shed at night to rear;
 Or run, my own adopted Bride,
 A sylvan Huntress at my side,
 And drive the flying deer!

"Beloved Ruth!"—No more he said.
 Sweet Ruth alone at midnight shed
 A solitary tear.
 She thought again—and did agree
 With him to sail across the sea,
 And drive the flying deer.

" And now, as fitting is and right,
 We in the Church our faith will plight,
 A Husband and a Wife."

Even so they did; and I may say
 That to sweet Ruth that happy day
 Was more than human life.

Through dream and vision did she sink,
 Delighted all the while to think
 That, on those lonesome floods,
 And green savannahs, she should share
 His board with lawful joy, and bear
 His name in the wild woods.

But, as you have before been told,
 This Stripling, sportive, gay, and bold;
 And with his dancing crest
 So beautiful, through savage lands
 Had roamed about with vagrant bands
 Of Indians in the West.

The wind, the tempest roaring high,
The tumult of a tropic sky,
Might well be dangerous food
For him, a Youth to whom was given
So much of earth so much of Heaven,
And such impetuous blood.

Whatever in those Climes he found
Irregular in sight or sound
Did to his mind impart
A kindred impulse, seemed allied
To his own powers, and justified
The workings of his heart.

Nor less to feed voluptuous thought
The beauteous forms of nature wrought,
Fair trees and lovely flowers ;
The breezes their own languor lent ;
The stars had feelings, which they sent
Into those magic bowers.

Yet, in his worst pursuits, I ween
That sometimes there did intervene
Pure hopes of high intent ;
For passions linked to forms so fair
And stately needs must have their share
Of noble sentiment.

But ill he lived, much evil saw
With men to whom no better law
Nor better life was known ;
Deliberately and undeceived
Those wild men's vices he received,
And gave them back his own.

His genius and his moral frame
Were thus impaired, and he became
The slave of low desires :
A Man who without self-controul
Would seek what the degraded soul
Unworthily admires.

And yet he ~~with~~ no feigned delight
 Had wooed ~~the~~ maiden, day and night
 Had loved her, night and morn :
 What could he ~~less than~~ love a Maid
 Whose heart with so much nature played ?
 So kind and so forlorn !

But now the pleasant dream was gone ;
 No hope, no wish remained, not one,
 They stirred him now no more ;
 New objects did new pleasure give,
 And once again he wished to live
 As lawless as before.

Meanwhile, as ~~thus~~ with him it fared,
 They for the ~~voyage~~ were prepared,
 And went to the sea-shore ;
 But, when they ~~thither came~~, the Youth
 Deserted his poor Bride, and Ruth
 Could never find him more.

"God help thee, Ruth!"—Such pains she had
That she in half a year was mad
And in a prison housed;
And there, exulting in her wrongs,
Among the music of her songs
She fearfully caroused.

Yet sometimes milder hours she knew,
Nor wanted sun, nor rain, nor dew,
Nor pastimes of the May,
—They all were with her in her cell;
And a wild brook with cheerful knell
Did o'er the pebbles play.

When Ruth three seasons thus had lain
There came a respite to her pain,
She from her prison fled;
But of the Vagrant none took thought;
And where it liked her best she sought
Her shelter and her bread.

Among the fields she breathed again :
 The master-current of her brain
 Ran permanent and free ;
 And, coming to the banks of Tone*,
 There did she rest ; and dwell alone
 Under the greenwood tree.

The engines of her pain, the tools
 That shaped her sorrow, rocks and pools,
 And airs that gently stir
 The vernal leaves, she loved them still,
 Nor ever taxed them with the ill
 Which had been done to her.

* The Tone is a River of Somersetshire at no great distance from the Quantock Hills. These Hills, which are alluded to a few Stanzas below, are extremely beautiful, and in most places richly covered with Coppice woods.

A Barn her winter bed supplies ;
 But till the warmth of summer skies
 And summer days is gone,
 (And all do in this tale agree)
 She sleeps beneath the greenwood tree,
 And other home hath none.

An innocent life, yet far astray !
 And Ruth will, long before her day,
 Be broken down and old.
 Sore aches she needs must have ! but less
 Of mind, than body's wretchedness,
 From damp, and rain, and cold.

If she is pressed by want of food,
 She from her dwelling in the wood
 Repairs to a road-side ;
 And there she begs at one steep place,
 Where up and down with easy pace
 The horsemen-travellers ride.

That oaten Pipe of hers is mute,
 Or thrown away ; but with a flute
 Her loneliness she cheers :
 This flute, made of a hemlock stalk,
 At evening in his homeward walk
 The Quantock Woodman hears.

I, too, have passed her on the hills
 Setting her little water-mills
 By spouts and fountains wild—
 Such small machinery as she turned
 Ere she had wept, ere she had mourned,
 A young and happy Child !

Farewell ! and when thy days are told,
 Ill-fated Ruth ! in hallowed mould
 Thy corpse shall buried be ;
 For thee a funeral bell shall ring,
 And all the congregation sing
 A Christian psalm for thee.

LINES

Written with a Slate-pencil, upon a Stone, the largest of a heap lying near a deserted Quarry, upon one of the Islands at Rydale.

---

Stranger! this hillock of misshapen stones
 Is not a ruin of the ancient time,
 Nor, as perchance thou rashly deem'st, the Cairn
 Of some old British Chief: 'tis nothing more
 Than the rude embryo of a little Dome
 Or Pleasure-house, once destined to be built
 Among the birch-trees of this rocky isle.
 But, as it chanced, Sir William having learned
 That from the shore a full-grown man might wade,
 And make himself a freeman of this spot

At any hour he chose, the Knight forthwith
Desisted, and the quarry and the mound
Are monuments of his unfinished task.—
The block on which these lines are traced, perhaps,
Was once selected as the corner-stone
Of the intended Pile, which would have been
Some quaint odd play-thing of elaborate skill,
So that, I guess, the linnet and the thrush,
And other little Builders who dwell here,
Had wondered at the work. But blame him not,
For old Sir William was a gentle Knight
Bred in this vale, to which he appertained
With all his ancestry. Then peace to him,
And for the outrage which he had devised
Entire forgiveness!—But if thou art one
On fire with thy impatience to become
An inmate of these mountains, if, disturbed
By beautiful conceptions, thou hast hewn
Out of the quiet rock the elements

Of thy trim mansion destined soon to blaze
In snow-white glory, think again, and, taught
By old Sir William and his quarry, leave
Thy fragments to the bramble and the rose ;
There let the vernal Slow-worm sun himself,
And let the Redbreast hop from stone to stone.

In the School of ——— is a Tablet, on which are inscribed, in gilt letters, the names of the several persons who have been Schoolmasters there since the foundation of the School, with the time at which they entered upon and quitted their office. Opposite one of those names the Author wrote the following lines.

If Nature, for a favourite Child
 In thee hath tempered so her clay,
 That every hour thy heart runs wild,
 Yet never once doth go astray,

Read o'er these lines ; and then review
 This tablet, that thus humbly rears
 In such diversity of hue
 Its history of two hundred years.

—When through this little wreck of fame,
 Cypher and syllable ! thine eye
 Has travelled down to Matthew's name,
 Pause with no common sympathy.

And, if a sleeping tear should wake,
 Then be it neither checked nor stayed :
 For Matthew a request I make
 Which for himself he had not made.

Poor Matthew, all his frolics o'er,
 Is silent as a standing pool ;
 Far from the chimney's merry roar,
 And murmur of the village school.

The sighs which Matthew heaved were sighs
 Of one tired out with fun and madness ;
 The tears which came to Matthew's eyes
 Were tears of light, the oil of gladness.

Yet, sometimes, when the secret cup
Of still and serious thought went round,
It seemed as if he drank it up—
He felt with spirit so profound.

—Thou soul of God's best earthly mould!
Thou happy soul! and can it be
That these two words of glittering gold
Are all that must remain to thee?

THE

Two APRIL MORNINGS.

We walked along, while bright and red
Uprose the morning sun ;
And Matthew stopped, he looked, and said,
“ The will of God be done ! ”

A village Schoolmaster was he,
With hair of glittering gray ;
As blithe a man as you could see
On a spring holiday.

And on that morning, through the grass,
And by the steaming rills,
We travelled merrily, to pass
A day among the hills.

“ Our work,” said I, “ was well begun ;
Then, from thy breast what thought,
Beneath so beautiful a sun,
So sad a sigh has brought ?”

A second time did Matthew stop ;
And fixing still his eye
Upon the eastern mountain-top,
To me he made reply :

“ Yon cloud with that long purple cleft
Brings fresh into my mind
A day like this which I have left
Full thirty years behind.

“ And just above yon slope of corn
Such colours, and no other
Were in the sky, that April morn,
Of this the very brother.

“ With rod and line my silent sport
I plied by Derwent's wave ;
And, coming to the church, stopp'd short
Beside my daughter's grave.

“ Nine summers had she scarcely seen,
The pride of all the vale ;
And then she sung ;—she would have been
A very nightingale.

“ Six feet in earth my Emma lay ;
And yet I loved her more,
For so it seemed, than till that day
I e'er had loved before.

“ And turning from her grave, I met
Beside the church-yard Yew
A blooming Girl, whose hair was wet
With points of morning dew.

" A basket on her head she bare ;
 Her brow was smooth and white :
 To see a Child so very fair,
 It was a pure delight !

" No fountain from its rocky cave
 E'er tripped with foot so free ;
 She seemed as happy as a wave
 That dances on the sea.

" There came from me a sigh of pain
 Which I could ill confine ;
 I looked at her and looked again :
 —And did not wish her mine."
 Matthew is in his grave, yet now
 Methinks I see him stand,
 As at that moment, with his bough
 Of wilding in his hand.

The FOUNTAIN,A Conversation.

---

We talked with open heart, and tongue
Affectionate and true ;
A pair of Friends, though I was young,
And Matthew seventy-two.

We lay beneath a spreading oak,
Beside a mossy seat ;
And from the turf a fountain broke,
And gurgled at our feet.

“ Now, Matthew ! let us try to match
This water’s pleasant tune
With some old Border-song, or Catch
That suits a summer’s noon.

“ Or of the Church-clock and the chimes
Sing here beneath the shade,
That half-mad thing of witty rhymes
Which you last April made !”

In silence Matthew lay, and eyed
The spring beneath the tree ;
And thus the dear old man replied,
The gray-haired man of glee :

“ Down to the vale this water steers,
How merrily it goes !
’Twill murmur on a thousand years,
And flow as now it flows.

“ And here, on this delightful day,
I cannot choose but think
How oft, a vigorous man, I lay
Beside this Fountain’s brink.

“ My eyes are dim with childish tears,
 My heart is idly stirred,
 For the same sound is in my ears
 Which in those days I heard.

“ Thus fares it still in our decay :
 And yet the wiser mind
 Mourns less for what age takes away
 Than what it leaves behind.

“ The Blackbird in the summer trees,
 The Lark upon the hill,
 Let loose their carols when they please,
 Are quiet when they will.

“ With Nature never do they wage
 A foolish strife ; they see
 A happy youth, and their old age
 Is beautiful and free :

" But we are pressed by heavy laws ;
And often, glad no more,
We wear a face of joy, because
We have been glad of yore.

" If there is one who need bemoan
His kindred laid in earth,
The household hearts that were his own,
It is the man of mirth.

" My days, my Friend, are almost gone,
My life has been approved,
And many love me ; but by none
Am I enough beloved."

" Now both himself and me he wrongs,
The man who thus complains !
I live and sing my idle songs
Upon these happy plains,

“ And, Matthew, for thy Children dead
I'll be a son to thee !”
At this he grasped his hands, and said
“ Alas ! that cannot be.”

We rose up from the fountain-side ;
And down the smooth descent
Of the green sheep-track did we glide ;
And through the wood we went ;

And, ere we came to Leonard's Rock,
He sang those witty rhymes
About the crazy old church clock
And the bewildered chimes.

NUTTING.

---

It seems a day,
(I speak of one from many singled out)
One of those heavenly days which cannot die,
When forth I sallied from our Cottage-door*,
And with a wallet o'er my shoulder slung,
A nutting crook in hand, I turned my steps
Towards the distant woods, a Figure quaint,
Tricked out in proud disguise of Beggar's weeds
Put on for the occasion, by advice
And exhortation of my frugal Dame.
Motley accoutrement ! of power to smile

* The house at which I was boarded during the time I was at School.

At thorns, and brakes, and brambles, and, in truth,
More ragged than need was. Among the woods,
And o'er the pathless rocks, I forced my way
Until, at length, I came to one dear nook
Unvisited, where not a broken bough
Drooped with its withered leaves, ungracious sign
Of devastation, but the hazels rose
Tall and erect, with milk-white clusters hung,
A virgin scene !—A little while I stood,
Breathing with such suppression of the heart
As joy delights in ; and with wise restraint
Voluptuous, fearless of a rival, eyed
The banquet, or beneath the trees I sate
Among the flowers, and with the flowers I played ;
A temper known to those, who, after long
And weary expectation, have been blessed
With sudden happiness beyond all hope.—
Perhaps it was a bower beneath whose leaves
The violets of five seasons re-appear
And fade, unseen by any human eye ;

Where fairy water-breaks do murmur-on
 For ever, and I saw the sparkling foam,
 And with my cheek on one of those green stones
 That, fleeced with moss, beneath the shady trees,
 Lay round me, scattered like a flock of sheep,
 I heard the murmur and the murmuring sound,
 In that sweet mood when pleasure loves to pay
 Tribute to ease ; and, of its joy secure,
 The heart luxuriates with indifferent things,
 Wasting its kindliness on stocks and stones,
 And on the vacant air. Then up I rose,
 And dragged to earth both branch and bough, with crash

And merciless ravage ; and the shady nook
 Of hazels, and the green and mossy bower,
 Deformed and sullied, patiently gave up
 Their quiet being : and, unless I now
 Confound my present feelings with the past,
 Even then, when from the bower I turned away
 Exulting, rich beyond the wealth of kings,

I felt a sense of pain when I beheld
The silent trees and the intruding sky.—

Then, dearest Maiden! move along these shades
In gentleness of heart; with gentle hand
Touch,——for there is a Spirit in the woods.

Three years she grew in sun and shower,
Then Nature said, "A lovelier flower
On earth was never sown ;
This Child I to myself will take ;
She shall be mine, and I will make
A Lady of my own.

"Myself will to my darling be
Both law and impulse ; and with me
The Girl, in rock and plain,
In earth and heaven, in glade and bower,
Shall feel an overseeing power
To kindle or restrain.

" She shall be sportive as the Fawn
That wild with glee across the lawn
Or up the mountain springs ;
And hers shall be the breathing balm,
And hers the silence and the calm
Of mute insensate things.

" The floating Clouds their state shall lend
To her ; for her the willow bend ;
Nor shall she fail to see
Even in the motions of the Storm
Grace that shall mould the Maiden's form
By silent sympathy.

" The Stars of midnight shall be dear
To her ; and she shall lean her ear
In many a secret place
Where Rivulets dance their wayward round,
And beauty born of murmuring sound
Shall pass into her face.

“ And vital feelings of delight
Shall rear her form to stately height,
Her virgin bosom swell ;
Such thoughts to Lucy I will give
While she and I together live
Here in this happy Dell.”

Thus Nature spake—The work was done—
How soon my Lucy's race was run !
She died, and left to me
This heath, this calm, and quiet scene ;
The memory of what has been,
And never more will be.

The PET-LAMB,A PASTORAL.

---

The dew was falling fast, the stars began to blink ;
I heard a voice ; it said, " Drink, pretty Creature, drink !"
And, looking o'er the hedge, before me I espied
A snow-white mountain Lamb with a Maiden at its side.

No other sheep were near, the Lamb was all alone,
And by a slender cord was tethered to a stone ;
With one knee on the grass did the little Maiden kneel
While to that Mountain Lamb she gave its evening meal.

The Lamb while from her hand he thus his supper took Seemed to feast with head and ears ; and his tail with pleasure shook.

" Drink, pretty Creature, drink," she said in such a tone
That I almost received her heart into my own.

'Twas little Barbara Lewthwaite, a Child of beauty rare!
 I watched them with delight, they were a lovely pair.
 Now with her empty Can the Maiden turned away;
 But ere ten yards were gone her footsteps did she stay.

Towards the Lamb she looked; and from that shady place
 I unobserved could see the workings of her face:
 If Nature to her tongue could measured numbers bring,
 Thus, thought I, to her Lamb that little Maid might sing.

“What ails thee, Young One? What? Why pull so at thy cord?

Is it not well with thee? Well both for bed and board?
 Thy plot of grass is soft, and green as grass can be;
 Rest, little Young One, rest; what is't that aileth thee?

“What is it thou wouldst seek? What is wanting to thy heart?

Thy limbs are they not strong? And beautiful thou art:
 This grass is tender grass; these flowers they have no peers;

And that green corn all day is rustling in thy ears!

“ If the Sun be shining hot, do but stretch thy woollen chain,

This beech is standing by, its covert thou canst gain ;
For rain and mountain storms ! the like thou need'st not fear—

The rain and storm are things which scarcely can come here.

“ Rest, little Young One, rest ; thou hast forgot the day
When my Father found thee first in places far away ;
Many flocks were on the hills, but thou wert owned by none ;

And thy mother from thy side for evermore was gone.

“ He took thee in his arms, and in pity brought thee home :

A blessed day for thee ! then whither wouldst thou roam ?
A faithful Nurse thou hast, the Dam that did thee rear
Upon the mountain tops no kinder could have been.

“ Thou know’st that twice a day I have brought thee in this Can

Fresh water from the brook as clear as ever ran :
And twice in the day when the ground is wet with dew
I bring thee draughts of milk, warm milk it is and new.

“ Thy limbs will shortly be twice as stout as they are now,
Then I’ll yoke thee to my cart like a pony in the plough ;
My Playmate thou shalt be ; and when the wind is cold
Our hearth shall be thy bed, our house shall be thy fold.

“ It will not, will not rest !—poor Creature, can it be
That ’tis thy mother’s heart which is working so in thee ?
Things that I know not of belike to thee are dear,
And dreams of things which thou canst neither see nor hear.

“ Alas, the mountain tops that look so green and fair !
I’ve heard of fearful winds and darkness that come there ;
The little Brooks that seem all pastime and all play,
When they are angry, roar like Lions for their prey.

“ Here thou need'st not dread the raven in the sky ;
Night and day thou art safe,—our cottage is hard by.
Why bleat so after me ? Why pull so at thy chain ?
Sleep—and at break of day I will come to thee again !”

—As homeward through the lane I went with lazy feet,
This song to myself did I oftentimes repeat ;
And it seemed, as I retraced the ballad line by line,
That but half of it was hers, and one half of it was mine.

Again, and once again did I repeat the song ;
“ Nay,” said I, “ more than half to the Damsel must belong,
For she looked with such a look, and she spake with such a tone,
That I almost received her heart into my own.”

Written in GERMANY,On one of the coldest days of the Century.

I must apprise the Reader that the stoves in North Germany generally have the impression of a galloping Horse upon them, this being part of the Brunswick Arms.

---

A fig for your languages, German and Norse !
 Let me have the song of the Kettle ;
 And the tongs and the poker, instead of that Horse
 That gallops away with such fury and force
 On this dreary dull plate of black metal.

Our earth is no doubt made of excellent stuff ;
 But her pulses beat slower and slower :
 The weather in Forty was cutting and rough,
 And then, as Heaven knows, the Glass stood low enough ;
 And now it is four degrees lower.

Here 's a Fly, a disconsolate creature, perhaps
 A child of the field, or the grove ;
 And, sorrow for him ! this dull treacherous heat
 Has seduced the poor fool from his winter retreat,
 And he creeps to the edge of my stove.

Alas ! how he fumbles about the domains
 Which this comfortless oven environ !
 He cannot find out in what track he must crawl,
 Now back to the tiles, and now back to the wall,
 And now on the brink of the iron.

Stock-still there he stands like a traveller bemazed ;
 The best of his skill he has tried ;
 His feelers methinks I can see him put forth
 To the East and the West, and the South and the North ;
 But he finds neither Guide-post nor Guide.

See ! his spindles sink under him, foot, leg and thigh ;
 His eyesight and hearing are lost ;
 Between life and death his blood freezes and thaws ;
 And his two pretty pinions of blue dusky gauze
 Are glued to his sides by the frost.

No Brother, no Friend has he near him—while I
 Can draw warmth from the cheek of my Love ;
 As blest and as glad in this desolate gloom,
 As if green summer grass were the floor of my room,
 And woodbines were hanging above.

Yet, God is my witness, thou small helpless Thing !
 Thy life I would gladly sustain
 Till summer comes up from the South, and with crowds
 Of thy brethren a march thou shouldst sound through the clouds,
 And back to the forests again.

The CHILDLESS FATHER.

“ Up, Timothy, up with your Staff and away !
 Not a soul in the village this morning will stay ;
 The Hare has just started from Hamilton's grounds,
 And Skiddaw is glad with the cry of the hounds.”

—Of coats and of jackets gray, scarlet and green,
 On the slopes of the pastures all colours were seen ;
 With their comely blue aprons, and caps white as snow,
 The Girls on the hills made a holiday show.

The bason of box-wood *, just six months before,
 Had stood on the table at Timothy's door ;

* In several parts of the North of England, when a funeral takes place, a bason full of Sprigs of Box-wood is placed at

A Coffin through Timothy's threshold had passed ;
One Child did it bear, and that Child was his last.

Now fast up the dell came the noise and the fray,
The horse and the horn, and the hark ! hark away !
Old Timothy took up his staff, and he shut
With a leisurely motion the door of his hut.

Perhaps to himself at that moment he said,
" The key I must take, for my Ellen is dead."
But of this in my ears not a word did he speak,
And he went to the chase with a tear on his cheek.

the door of the house from which the Coffin is taken up, and each person who attends the funeral ordinarily takes a Sprig of this Box-wood, and throws it into the grave of the deceased.

THE OLD CUMBERLAND BEGGAR.

---

The class of Beggars to which the Old Man here described belongs, will probably soon be extinct. It consisted of poor, and, mostly, old and infirm persons, who confined themselves to a stated round in their neighbourhood, and had certain fixed days, on which, at different houses, they regularly received alms, sometimes in money, but mostly in provisions.

---

I saw an aged beggar in my walk,
And he was seated by the highway side
On a low structure of rude masonry
Built at the foot of a huge hili, that they
Who lead their horses down the steep rough road
May thence remount at ease. The aged Man
Had placed his staff across the broad smooth stone

That overlays the pile, and from a bag
All white with flour, the dole of village dames,
He drew his scraps and fragments, one by one,
And scanned them with a fixed and serious look
Of idle computation. In the sun,
Upon the second step of that small pile,
Surrounded by those wild unpeopled hills,
He sat, and ate his food in solitude :
And ever, scattered from his palsied hand,
That, still attempting to prevent the waste,
Was baffled still, the crumbs in little showers
Fell on the ground, and the small mountain birds,
Not venturing yet to peck their destined meal,
Approached within the length of half his staff.

Him from my childhood have I known ; and then
He was so old, he seems not older now ;
He travels on, a solitary Man,

So helpless in appearance, that for him
The sauntering Horseman-traveller does not throw
With careless hand his alms upon the ground,
But stops, that he may safely lodge the coin
Within the old Man's hat ; nor quits him so,
But still when he has given his horse the rein
Towards the aged Beggar turns a look,
Sidelong and half-reverted. She who tends
The Toll-gate, when in summer at her door
She turns her wheel, if on the road she sees
The aged Beggar coming, quits her work,
And lifts the latch for him that he may pass.
The Post-boy, when his rattling wheels o'ertake
The aged Beggar in the woody lane,
Shouts to him from behind, and, if perchance
The old Man does not change his course, the Boy
Turns with less noisy wheels to the road-side,
And passes gently by, without a curse

Upon his lips, or anger at his heart.
He travels on, a solitary Man,
His age has no companion. On the ground
His eyes are turned, and, as he moves along,
They move along the ground ; and, evermore,
Instead of common and habitual sight
Of fields with rural works, of hill and dale,
And the blue sky, one little span of earth
Is all his prospect. Thus, from day to day,
Bowbent, his eyes for ever on the ground,
He plies his weary journey ; seeing still,
And never knowing that he sees, some straw,
Some scattered leaf, or marks which, in one track,
The nails of cart or chariot wheel have left
Impressed on the white road, in the same line,
At distance still the same. Poor Traveller !
His staff trails with him ; scarcely do his feet
Disturb the summer dust ; he is so still

In look and motion, that the cottage curs,
Ere he have passed the door, will turn away,
Weary of barking at him. Boys and Girls,
The vacant and the busy, Maids and Youths,
And Urchins newly breeched all pass him by :
Him even the slow-paced Waggon leaves behind.

But deem not this Man useless.—Statesmen ! ye
Who are so restless in your wisdom, ye
Who have a broom still ready in your hands
To rid the world of nuisances ; ye proud,
Heart-swoln, while in your pride ye contemplate
Your talents, power, and wisdom, deem him not
A burthen of the earth. 'Tis Nature's law
That none, the meanest of created things,
Of forms created the most vile and brute,
The dullest or most noxious, should exist
Divorced from good—a spirit and pulse of good,

A life and soul to every mode of being Inseparably linked. While thus he creeps
From door to door, the Villagers in him
Behold a record which together binds
Past deeds and offices of charity,
Else unremembered, and so keeps alive
The kindly mood in hearts which lapse of years,
And that half-wisdom half-experience gives,
Make slow to feel, and by sure steps resign
To selfishness and cold oblivious cares.
Among the farms and solitary huts,
Hamlets and thinly-scattered villages,
Where'er the aged Beggar takes his rounds,
The mild necessity of use compels
To acts of love ; and habit does the work
Of reason ; yet prepares that after joy
Which reason cherishes. And thus the soul,
By that sweet taste of pleasure unpursued,

Doth find itself insensibly disposed
To virtue and true goodness. Some there are,
By their good works exalted, lofty minds
And meditative, authors of delight
And happiness, which to the end of time
Will live, and spread, and kindle ; minds like these,
In childhood, from this solitary Being,
This helpless Wanderer, have perchance received
(A thing more precious far than all that books
Or the solitudes of love can do !)
That first mild touch of sympathy and thought,
In which they found their kindred with a world
Where want and sorrow were. The easy Man
Who sits at his own door, and, like the pear
Which overhangs his head from the green wall,
Feeds in the sunshine ; the robust and young,
The prosperous and unthinking, they who live
Sheltered, and flourish in a little grove

Of their own kindred, all behold in him
 A silent monitor, which on their minds
 Must needs impress a transitory thought
 Of self-congratulation, to the heart
 Of each recalling his peculiar boons,
 His charters and exemptions ; and, perchance,
 Though he to no one give the fortitude
 And circumspection needful to preserve
 His present blessings, and to husband up
 The respite of the season, he, at least,
 And 'tis no vulgar service, makes them felt.

Yet further.—Many, I believe, there are
 Who live a life of virtuous decency,
 Men who can hear the Decalogue and feel
 No self-reproach ; who of the moral law
 Established in the land where they abide
 Are strict observers ; and not negligent,

Meanwhile, in any tenderness of heart
 Or act of love to those with whom they dwell,
 Their kindred, and the children of their blood.
 Praise be to such, and to their slumbers peace !
 —But of the poor man ask, the abject poor,
 Go and demand of him, if there be here
 In this cold abstinence from evil deeds,
 And these inevitable charities,
 Wherewith to satisfy the human soul ?
 No—Man is dear to Man ; the poorest poor
 Long for some moments in a weary life
 When they can know and feel that they have been Themselves the fathers and the dealers out
 Of some small blessings, have been kind to such
 As needed kindness, for this single cause,
 That we have all of us one human heart.
 —Such pleasure is to one kind Being known ;
 My Neighbour, when with punctual care, each week

Duly as Friday comes, though prest herself
 By her own wants, she from her chest of meal
 Takes one unsparing handful for the scrip
 Of this old Mendicant, and, from her door
 Returning with exhilarated heart,
 Sits by her fire and builds her hope in heaven.

Then let him pass, a blessing on his head !
 And while in that vast solitude to which
 The tide of things has led him, he appears
 To breathe and live but for himself alone,
 Unblamed, uninjured, let him bear about
 The good which the benignant law of Heaven
 Has hung around him ; and, while life is his,
 Still let him prompt the unlettered Villagers
 To tender offices and pensive thoughts.
 Then let him pass, a blessing on his head !
 And, long as he can wander, let him breathe

The freshness of the valleys ; let his blood
Struggle with frosty air and winter snows ;
And let the chartered wind that sweeps the heath
Beat his gray locks against his withered face.
Reverence the hope whose vital anxiousness
Gives the last human interest to his heart.
May never HOUSE, misnamed of INDUSTRY !
Make him a captive ! for that pent-up din,
Those life-consuming sounds that clog the air,
Be his the natural silence of old age !
Let him be free of mountain solitudes ;
And have around him, whether heard or not,
The pleasant melody of woodland birds.
Few are his pleasures : if his eyes, which now
Have been so long familiar with the earth,
No more behold the horizontal sun
Rising or setting, let the light at least
Find a free entrance to their languid orbs.

And let him, where and when he will, sit down
Beneath the trees, or by the grassy bank
Of high-way side, and with the little birds
Share his chance-gathered meal ; and, finally,
As in the eye of Nature he has lived,
So in the eye of Nature let him die.

RURAL ARCHITECTURE.

---

There's George Fisher, Charles Fleming, and Reginald Shore,

Three rosy-cheeked School-boys, the highest not more
Than the height of a Counsellor's bag ;
To the top of GREAT How did it please them to climb ;
And there they built up, without mortar or lime,
A Man on the peak of the crag.

They built him of stones gathered up as they lay ;
They built him and christened him all in one day,
An Urchin both vigorous and hale ;
And so without scruple they called him Ralph Jones.
Now Ralph is renowned for the length of his bones ;
The Magog of Legberthwaite dale.

Just half a week after, the wind sallied forth,
And, in anger or merriment, out of the North
Coming on with a terrible pother,
From the peak of the crag blew the Giant away.
And what did these School-boys?—The very next day
They went and they built up another.

---

GREAT How is a single and conspicuous hill, which rises towards the foot of Thirl-mere, on the western side of the beautiful dale of Legberthwaite, along the high road between Keswick and Ambleside.

A POET'S EPITAPH.

Art thou a Statesman, in the van
Of public business trained and bred ?
—First learn to love one living man ;
Then mayst thou think upon the dead.

A Lawyer art thou ?—draw not nigh ;
Go, carry to some other place
The hardness of thy coward eye,
The falsehood of thy sallow face.

Art thou a Man of purple cheer ?
A rosy Man, right plump to see ?
Approach ; yet, Doctor, not too near :
This grave no cushion is for thee.

Art thou a man of gallant pride,
 A Soldier, and no man of chaff?
 Welcome!—but lay thy sword aside,
 And lean upon a Peasant's staff.

Physician art thou? One, all eyes,
 Philosopher! a fingering slave,
 One that would peep and botanize
 Upon his mother's grave?

Wrappt closely in thy sensual fleece
 O turn aside, and take, I pray,
 That he below may rest in peace,
 Thy pin-point of a soul away!

—A Moralist perchance appears;
 Led, Heaven knows how! to this poor sod:
 And He has neither eyes nor ears;
 Himself his world, and his own God;

One to whose smooth-rubbed soul can cling
Nor form, nor feeling, great nor small ;
A reasoning, self-sufficient thing,
An intellectual All in All !

Shut close the door ; press down the latch ;
Sleep in thy intellectual crust ;
Nor lose ten tickings of thy watch
Near this unprofitable dust.

But who is He, with modest looks,
And clad in homely russet brown ?
He murmurs near the running brooks
A music sweeter than their own.

He is retired as noontide dew,
Or fountain in a noonday grove ;
And you must love him, ere to you
He will seem worthy of your love.

The outward shows of sky and earth,
Of hill and valley, he has viewed ;
And impulses of deeper birth
Have come to him in solitude.

In common things that round us lie
Some random truths he can impart,
—The harvest of a quiet eye
That broods and sleeps on his own heart.

But he is weak, both Man and Boy,
Hath been an idler in the land ;
Contented if he might enjoy
The things which others understand.

—Come hither in thy hour of strength ;
Come, weak as is a breaking wave !
Here stretch thy body at full length ;
Or build thy house upon this grave.

Between two sister moorland rills
There is a spot that seems to lie
Sacred to flowrets of the hills,
And sacred to the sky.
And in this smooth and open dell
There is a tempest-stricken tree ;
A corner-stone by lightning cut,
The last stone of a cottage hut ;
And in this dell you see
A thing no storm can e'er destroy,
The shadow of a Danish Boy.

In clouds above, the Lark is heard,
He sings his blithest and his best ;

But in this lonesome nook the Bird
Did never build his nest.
No Beast, no Bird hath here his home ;
The Bees borne on the breezy air
Pass high above those fragrant bells
To other flowers, to other dells,
Nor ever linger there.
The Danish Boy walks here alone :
The lovely dell is all his own.

A spirit of noon day is he,
He seems a Form of flesh and blood ;
Nor piping Shepherd shall he be,
Nor Herd-boy of the wood.
A regal vest of fur he wears,
In colour like a raven's wing ;
It fears not rain, nor wind, nor dew ;
But in the storm 'tis fresh and blue
As budding pines in Spring ;

His helmet has a vernal grace,
Fresh as the bloom upon his face.

A harp is from his shoulder slung :
He rests the harp upon his knee ;
And there in a forgotten tongue
He warbles melody.
Of flocks upon the neighbouring hills
He is the darling and the joy ;
And often, when no cause appears,
The mountain ponies prick their ears,
They hear the Danish Boy,
While in the dell he sits alone
Beside the tree and corner-stone.

There sits he : in his face you spy
No trace of a ferocious air,
Nor ever was a cloudless sky
So steady or so fair.

The lovely Danish Boy is blest
And happy in his flowery cove :
From bloody deeds his thoughts are far ;
And yet he warbles songs of war ;
They seem like songs of love,
For calm and gentle is his mien ;
Like a dead Boy he is serene.

ON THE

NAMING OF PLACES.

ADVERTISEMENT.

By Persons resident in the country and attached to rural objects, many places will be found unnamed or of unknown names, where little Incidents will have occurred, or feelings been experienced, which will have given to such places a private and peculiar interest. From a wish to give some sort of record to such Incidents, or renew the gratification of such Feelings, Names have been given to Places by the Author and some of his Friends, and the following Poems written in consequence.

POEMS on the NAMING of PLACES.

I.

It was an April morning : fresh and clear
 The Rivulet, delighting in its strength,
 Ran with a young man's speed ; and yet the voice
 Of waters which the winter had supplied
 Was softened down into a vernal tone.
 The spirit of enjoyment and desire,
 And hopes and wishes, from all living things
 Went circling, like a multitude of sounds.
 The budding groves appeared as if in haste
 To spur the steps of June ; as if their shades
 Of various green were hindrances that stood
 Between them and their object : yet, meanwhile,
 There was such deep contentment in the air

That every naked ash, and tardy tree
 Yet leafless, seemed as though the countenance
 With which it looked on this delightful day
 Were native to the summer.—Up the brook
 I roamed in the confusion of my heart,
 Alive to all things and forgetting all.
 At length I to a sudden turning came
 In this continuous glen, where down a rock
 The stream, so ardent in its course before,
 Sent forth such sallies of glad sound, that all
 Which I till then had heard, appeared the voice
 Of common pleasure ; beast and bird, the Lamb,
 The Shepherd's Dog, the Linnet and the Thrush
 Vied with this Waterfall, and made a song
 Which, while I listened, seemed like the wild growth
 Or like some natural produce of the air
 That could not cease to be. Green leaves were here,
 But 'twas the foliage of the rocks, the birch,
 The yew, the holly, and the bright green thorn,

With hanging islands of resplendent furze :
 And on a summit, distant a short space,
 By any who should look beyond the dell,
 A single mountain Cottage might be seen.
 I gazed and gazed, and to myself I said,
 " Our thoughts at least are ours ; and this wild nook,

My EMMA, I will dedicate to thee."

——Soon did the spot become my other home,
 My dwelling, and my out-of-doors abode.
 And, of the Shepherds who have seen me there,
 To whom I sometimes in our idle talk
 Have told this fancy, two or three, perhaps,
 Years after we are gone and in our graves,
 When they have cause to speak of this wild place,
 May call it by the name of EMMA'S DELL.

To JOANNA.

Amid the smoke of cities did you pass
Your time of early youth ; and there you learned,
From years of quiet industry, to love
The living Beings by your own fire-side,
With such a strong devotion, that your heart
Is slow towards the sympathies of them
Who look upon the hills with tenderness,
And make dear friendships with the streams and groves.

Yet we, who are transgressors in this kind,
Dwelling retired in our simplicity
Among the woods and fields, we love you well,
Joanna ! and I guess, since you have been

So distant from us now for two long years,
That you will gladly listen to discourse
However trivial, if you thence are taught
That they, with whom you once were happy, talk
Familiarly of you and of old times.

While I was seated, now some ten days past,
Beneath those lofty firs, that overtop
Their antient neighbour, the old Steeple tower,
The Vicar from his gloomy house hard by
Came forth to greet me ; and when he had asked,
“ How fares Joanna, that wild-hearted Maid !
And when will she return to us ? ” he paused ;
And, after short exchange of village news,
He with grave looks demanded, for what cause,
Reviving obsolete Idolatry,
I, like a Runic Priest, in characters
Of formidable size had chiseled out
Some uncouth name upon the native rock,

Above the Rotha, by the forest side:

—Now, by those dear immunities of heart

Engendered betwixt malice and true love,

I was not loth to be so catechized,

And this was my reply :—“ As it befel,

One summer morning we had walked abroad

At break of day, Joanna and myself.

—’Twas that delightful season, when the broom,

Full-flowered, and visible on every steep,

Along the copses runs in veins of gold.

Our pathway led us on to Rotha’s banks ;

And when we came in front of that tall rock

Which looks towards the East, I there stopped short,

And traced the lofty barrier with my eye

From base to summit ; such delight I found.

To note in shrub and tree, in stone and flower,

That intermixture of delicious hues,

Along so vast a surface, all at once,

In one impression, by connecting force
 Of their own beauty, imaged in the heart.
 —When I had gazed perhaps two minutes' space,
 Joanna, looking in my eyes, beheld
 That ravishment of mine, and laughed aloud.
 The rock, like something starting from a sleep,
 Took up the Lady's voice, and laughed again :
 That antient Woman seated on Helm-crag
 Was ready with her cavern ; Hammar-Scar,
 And the tall Steep of Silver-How sent forth
 A noise of laughter ; southern Loughrigg heard,
 And Fairfield answered with a mountain tone :
 Helvellyn far into the clear blue sky
 Carried the Lady's voice,—old Skiddaw blew
 His speaking-trumpet ;—back out of the clouds
 Of Glaramara southward came the voice ;
 And Kirkstone tossed it from his misty head.
 Now whether, (said I to our cordial Friend
 Who in the hey-day of astonishment

Smiled in my face) this were in simple truth
 A work accomplished by the brotherhood
 Of antient mountains, or my ear was touched
 With dreams and visionary impulses,
 Is not for me to tell; but sure I am
 That there was a loud uproar in the hills.
 And, while we both were listening, to my side
 The fair Joanna drew, as if she wished
 To shelter from some object of her fear.
 —And hence, long afterwards, when eighteen moons
 Were wasted, as I chanced to walk alone
 Beneath this rock, at sun-rise, on a calm
 And silent morning, I sat down, and there,
 In memory of affections old and true,
 I chiseled out in those rude characters
 Joanna's name upon the living stone.
 And I, and all who dwell by my fire-side,
 Have called the lovely rock, JOANNA'S ROCK."

NOTE.

In Cumberland and Westmoreland are several Inscriptions, upon the native rock, which, from the wasting of Time, and the rudeness of the Workmanship, had been mistaken for Runic. They are without doubt Roman.

The Rotha, mentioned in this poem, is the River which, flowing through the Lakes of Grasmere and Rydale, falls into Wyndermere. On Helm-Crag, that impressive single Mountain at the head of the Vale of Grasmere, is a Rock which from most points of view bears a striking resemblance to an Old Woman cowering. Close by this rock is one of those Fissures or Caverns, which in the language of the Country are called Dungeons. Most of the Mountains here mentioned immediately surround the vale of Grasmere; of the others, some are at a considerable distance, but they belong to the same cluster.

There is an Eminence,—of these our hills
The last that parleys with the setting sun.
We can behold it from our Orchard-seat ;
And, when at evening we pursue our walk
Along the public way, this Cliff, so high
Above us, and so distant in its height,
Is visible, and often seems to send
Its own deep quiet to restore our hearts.
The meteors make of it a favourite haunt :
The star of Jove, so beautiful and large
In the mid heavens, is never half so fair
As when he shines above it. 'Tis in truth
The loneliest place we have among the clouds.

And She who dwells with me, whom I have loved
With such communion, that no place on earth
Can ever be a solitude to me,
Hath said, this lonesome Peak shall bear my name.

A narrow girdle of rough stones and crags,
A rude and natural causeway, interpos'd
Between the water and a winding slope
Of copse and thicket, leaves the eastern shore
Of Grasmere safe in its own privacy.
And there, myself and two beloved Friends,
One calm September morning, ere the mist
Had altogether yielded to the sun,
Sauntered on this retired and difficult way.
——Ill suits the road with one in haste, but we Played with our time ; and, as we strolled along,
It was our occupation to observe
Such objects as the waves had tossed ashore,

Feather, or leaf, or weed, or withered bough,
Each on the other heaped along the line.
Of the dry wreck. And, in our vacant mood,
Not seldom did we stop to watch some tuft
Of dandelion seed or thistle's beard,
Which, seeming lifeless half, and half impelled
By some internal feeling, skimmed along
Close to the surface of the lake that lay
Asleep in a dead calm—ran closely on
Along the dead calm lake, now here, now there,
In all its sportive wanderings all the while Making report of an invisible breeze
That was its wings, its chariot, and its horse,
Its very playmate, and its moving soul.
——And often, trifling with a privilege
Alike indulged to all, we paused, one now,
And now the other, to point out, perchance
To pluck, some flower or water-weed, too fair
Either to be divided from the place

On which it grew, or to be left alone
To its own beauty. Many such there are,
Fair Ferns and Flowers, and chiefly that tall Fern
So stately, of the Queen Osmunda named ;
Plant lovelier in its own retired abode
On Grasmere's beach, than Naiad by the side
Of Grecian brook, or Lady of the Mere
Sole-sitting by the shores of old Romance.
—So fared we that sweet morning: from the fields,
Meanwhile, a noise was heard, the busy mirth
Of Reapers, Men and Women, Boys and Girls.
Delighted much to listen to those sounds,
And, in the fashion which I have described,
Feeding unthinking fancies, we advanced
Along the indented shore ; when suddenly,
Through a thin veil of glittering haze, we saw
Before us on a point of jutting land
The tall and upright figure of a Man
Attired in peasant's garb, who stood alone

Angling beside the margin of a lake.
That way we turned our steps ; nor was it long
Ere, making ready comments on the sight
Which then we saw, with one and the same voice
We all cried out, that he must be indeed
An idle man, who thus could lose a day
Of the mid harvest, when the labourer's hire
Is ample, and some little might be stored
Wherewith to cheer him in the winter time.
Thus talking of that Peasant we approached
Close to the spot where with his rod and line
He stood alone ; whereat he turned his head
To greet us—and we saw a man worn down
By sickness, gaunt and lean, with sunken cheeks
And wasted limbs, his legs so long and lean
That for my single self I looked at them,
Forgetful of the body they sustained.—
Too weak to labour in the harvest field,
The Man was using his best skill to gain

A pittance from the dead unfeeling lake
That knew not of his wants. I will not say
What thoughts immediately were ours, nor how
The happy idleness of that sweet morn,
With all its lovely images, was changed
To serious musing and to self-reproach.
Nor did we fail to see within ourselves
What need there is to be reserved in speech,
And temper all our thoughts with charity.
—Therefore, unwilling to forget that day,
My Friend, Myself, and She who then received
The same admonishment, have called the place
By a memorial name, uncouth indeed
As e'er by Mariner was given to Bay
Or Foreland on a new-discovered coast,
And POINT RASH-JUDGMENT is the Name it bears.

To M. H.

· walk was far among the antient trees ;
 re was no road, nor any wood-man's path ;
 the thick umbrage, checking the wild growth weed and sapling, on the soft green turf ath the branches of itself had made k, which brought us to a slip of lawn,
 small bed of water in the woods.
 nd this pool both flocks and herds might nk
 rm margin, even as from a Well,
 Stone-bason which the Herdsman's hand
 d for their refreshment ; nor did sun

Or wind from any quarter ever come,
But as a blessing, to this calm recess,
This glade of water and this one green field ;
The spot was made by Nature for herself :
The travellers know it not, and 't will remain
Unknown to them : but it is beautiful ;
And if a man should plant his cottage near,
Should sleep beneath the shelter of its trees,
And blend its waters with his daily meal,
He would so love it that in his death hour
Its image would survive among his thoughts :
And therefore, my sweet MARY, this still nook
With all its beeches we have named for You.

LINESWritten when sailing in a BoatAt EVENING.*

How rich the wave, in front, imprest
With evening twilight's summer hues,
While, facing thus the crimson west,
The Boat her silent course pursues !
And see how dark the backward stream !
A little moment past, so smiling !
And still, perhaps, with faithless gleam,
Some other Loiterer beguiling.

Such views the youthful Bard allure ;
But, heedless of the following gloom,
He deems their colours shall endure
Till peace go with him to the tomb.
—And let him nurse his fond deceit,
And what if he must die in sorrow !
Who would not cherish dreams so sweet,
Though grief and pain may come tomorrow ?

REMEMBRANCE of COLLINS,

Written upon the Thames near Richmond.

Glide gently, thus for ever glide,
O Thames ! that other Bards may see
As lovely visions by thy side
As now, fair River ! come to me.
O glide, fair Stream ! for ever so,
Thy quiet soul on all bestowing,
Till all our minds for ever flow
As thy deep waters now are flowing.

Vain thought !....Yet be as now thou art,
That in thy waters may be seen
The image of a poet's heart,
How bright, how solemn, how serene !

Such as did once the Poet bless,
 Who, pouring here a later* ditty,
 Could find no refuge from distress
 But in the milder grief of pity.

Now let us, as we float along,
 For him suspend the dashing oar ;
 And pray that never child of Song
 May know that Poet's sorrows more.
 How calm ! how still ! the only sound,
 The dripping of the oar suspended !
 —The evening darkness gathers round
 By virtue's holiest Powers attended.

* Collins's Ode on the death of Thomson, the last written, I believe, of the poems which were published during his lifetime. This Ode is also alluded to in the next stanza.

THE TWO THIEVES,

Or The last Stage of AVARICE.

O now that the genius of Bewick were mine,
And the skill which he learned on the banks of the Tyne !
Then the Muses might deal with me just as they chose,
For I'd take my last leave both of verse and of prose.

What feats would I work with my magical hand !
Book learning and books should be banished the land :
And for hunger and thirst and such troublesome calls !
Every Ale-house should then have a feast on its walls.

The Traveller would hang his wet clothes on a chair ;
Let them smoke, let them burn, not a straw would he care;
For the Prodigal Son, Joseph's Dream and his Sheaves,
Oh, what would they be to my tale of two Thieves ?

Little Dan is unbreeched, he is three birth-days old ;
His Grandsire that age more than thirty times told ;
There are ninety good seasons of fair and foul weather
Between them, and both go a-stealing together.

With chips is the Carpenter strewing his floor ?
Is a cart-load of peats at an old Woman's door ?
Old Daniel his hand to the treasure will slide ;
And his Grandson 's as busy at work by his side.

Old Daniel begins, he stops short—and his eye
Through the last look of dotage is cunning and sly.
'Tis a look which at this time is hardly his own,
But tells a plain tale of the days that are flown.

Dan once had a heart which was moved by the wires
Of manifold pleasures and many desires :
And what if he cherished his purse ? 'Twas no more
Than treading a path trod by thousands before.

'Twas a path trod by thousands ; but Daniel is one
Who went something further than others have gone :
And now with old Daniel you see how it fares ;
You see to what end he has brought his gray hairs.

The Pair sally forth hand in hand : ere the sun
Has peered o'er the beeches their work is begun :
And yet, into whatever sin they may fall,
This Child but half knows it, and that not at all.

They hunt through the streets with deliberate tread,
And each in his turn is both leader and led ;
And, wherever they carry their plots and their wiles,
Every face in the village is dimpled with smiles.

Neither checked by the rich nor the needy they roam ;
For gray-headed Dan has a daughter at home,
Who will gladly repair all the damage that's done ;
And three, were it asked, would be rendered for one.

Old Man ! whom so oft I with pity have eyed,
I love thee, and love the sweet Boy at thy side :
Long yet mayst thou live ! for a teacher we see
That lifts up the veil of our nature in thee.

---

A whirl-blast from behind the hill
Rushed o'er the wood with startling sound :
Then all at once the air was still,
And showers of hail-stones pattered round.
Where leafless Oaks towered high above,
I sat within an undergrove
Of tallest hollies, tall and green ;
A fairer bower was never seen.
From year to year the spacious floor
With withered leaves is covered o'er,
You could not lay a hair between :
And all the year the bower is green.
But see ! where'er the hailstones drop
The withered leaves all skip and hop,
There's not a breeze—no breath of air—
Yet here, and there, and every where

Along the floor', beneath the shade
By those embowering hollies made,
The leaves in myriads jump and spring,
As if with pipes and music rare
Some Robin Good-fellow were there,
And all those leaves, that jump and spring,
Were each a joyous, living thing.

Oh ! grant me Heaven a heart at ease,
That I may never cease to find,
Even in appearances like these,
Enough to nourish and to stir my mind !

SONG

WANDERING JEW.

Though the torrents from their fountains
Roar down many a craggy steep,
Yet they find among the mountains
Resting-places calm and deep.

Though almost with eagle pinion
O'er the rocks the Chamois roam,
Yet he has some small dominion
Which, no doubt, he calls his home.

If on windy days the Raven
Gambol like a dancing skiff,
Not the less he loves his haven
On the bosom of the cliff.

Though the Sea-horse in the ocean
Own no dear domestic cave ;
Yet he slumbers without motion
On the calm and silent wave.

Day and night my toils redouble !
Never nearer to the goal,
Night and day I feel the trouble
Of the Wanderer in my soul.

PASTORAL POEM.

MICHAEL,
A PASTORAL POEM.

---

If from the public way you turn your steps
Up the tumultuous brook of Green-head Gill,
You will suppose that with an upright path
Your feet must struggle; in such bold ascent
The pastoral Mountains front you, face to face.
But, courage ! for beside that boisterous Brook
The mountains have all opened out themselves,
And made a hidden valley of their own.
No habitation there is seen ; but such
As journey thither find themselves alone
With a few sheep, with rocks and stones, and kites
That overhead are sailing in the sky.

It is in truth an utter solitude ;
Nor should I have made mention of this Dell
But for one object which you might pass by,
Might see and notice not. Beside the brook
There is a straggling heap of unhewn stones !
And to that place a story appertains,
Which, though it be ungarnished with events,
Is not unfit, I deem, for the fire-side,
Or for the summer shade. It was the first,
The earliest of those tales that spake to me
Of Shepherds, dwellers in the valleys, men
Whom I already loved, not verily
For their own sakes, but for the fields and hills
Where was their occupation and abode.
And hence this Tale, while I was yet a Boy
Careless of books, yet having felt the power
Of Nature, by the gentle agency
Of natural objects led me on to feel
For passions that were not my own, and think

(At random and imperfectly indeed)
 On man, the heart of man, and human life.
 Therefore, although it be a history
 Homely and rude, I will relate the same
 For the delight of a few natural hearts,
 And, with yet fonder feeling, for the sake
 Of youthful Poets, who among these Hills
 Will be my second self when I am gone.

UPON the Forest-side in Grasmere Vale
 There dwelt a Shepherd, Michael was his name,
 An old man, stout of heart, and strong of limb.
 His bodily frame had been from youth to age
 Of an unusual strength : his mind was keen,
 Intense and frugal, apt for all affairs,
 And in his Shepherd's calling he was prompt
 And watchful more than ordinary men.

Hence he had learned the meaning of all winds,
Of blasts of every tone ; and, oftentimes,
When others heeded not, He heard the South
Make subterraneous music, like the noise
Of Bagpipers on distant Highland hills ;
The Shepherd, at such warning, of his flock
Bethought him, and he to himself would say,
“ The winds are now devising work for me !”
And, truly, at all times the storm, that drives
The Traveller to a shelter, summoned him
Up to the mountains : he had been alone
Amid the heart of many thousand mists,
That came to him and left him on the heights.
So lived he till his eightieth year was past.

And grossly that man errs, who should suppose
That the green Valleys, and the Streams and Rocks
Were things indifferent to the Shepherd's thoughts.
Fields, where with cheerful spirits he had breathed

The common air ; the hills, which he so oft
 Had climbed with vigorous steps ; which had impressed

So many incidents upon his mind
 Of hardship, skill or courage, joy or fear ;
 Which like a book preserved the memory
 Of the dumb animals, whom he had saved,
 Had fed or sheltered, linking to such acts,
 So grateful in themselves, the certainty
 Of honourable gain ; these fields, these hills,
 Which were his living Being, even more Than his own blood—what could they less ? had laid

Strong hold on his affections, were to him
 A pleasurable feeling of blind love,
 The pleasure which there is in life itself.

He had not passed his days in singleness.
 He had a Wife, a comely Matron, old—

Though younger than himself full twenty years.
 She was a woman of a stirring life,
 Whose heart was in her house: two wheels she had
 Of antique form, this large for spinning wool,
 That small for flax; and if one wheel had rest,
 It was because the other was at work.
 The Pair had but one Inmate in their house,
 An only Child, who had been born to them
 When Michael telling o'er his years began
 To deem that he was old,—in Shepherd's phrase,
 With one foot in the grave. This only Son,
 With two brave Sheep-dogs tried in many a storm,
 The one of an inestimable worth,
 Made all their Household. I may truly say,
 That they were as a proverb in the vale
 For endless industry. When day was gone,
 And from their occupations out of doors
 The Son and Father were come home, even then
 Their labour did not cease; unless when all

Turned to their cleanly supper-board, and there,
 Each with a mess of pottage and skimmed milk,
 Sat round their basket piled with oaten cakes,
 And their plain home-made cheese. Yet when their meal

Was ended, LUKE (for so the Son was named)
 And his old Father both betook themselves
 To such convenient work as might employ
 Their hands by the fire-side; perhaps to card
 Wool for the Housewife's spindle, or repair
 Some injury done to sickle, flail, or scythe,
 Or other implement of house or field.

Down from the cieling by the chimney's edge,
 Which in our antient uncouth country style
 Did with a huge projection overbrow
 Large space beneath, as duly as the light
 Of day grew dim the Housewife hung a Lamp;
 An aged utensil, which had performed

Service beyond all others of its kind.
Early at evening did it burn and late,
Surviving Comrade of uncounted Hours,
Which going by from year to year had found
And left the couple neither gay perhaps
Nor cheerful, yet with objects and with hopes,
Living a life of eager industry.
And now, when LUKE was in his eighteenth year,
There by the light of this old Lamp they sat,
Father and Son, while late into the night
The Housewife plied her own peculiar work,
Making the cottage through the silent hours
Murmur as with the sound of summer flies.
The Light was famous in its neighbourhood,
And was a public Symbol of the life
The thrifty Pair had lived. For, as it chanced,
Their Cottage on a plot of rising ground
Stood single, with large prospect, North and South,
High into Easedale, up to Dunmal-Raise,

And Westward to the village near the Lake;
 And from this constant light, so regular
 And so far seen, the House itself, by all
 Who dwelt within the limits of the vale,
 Both old and young, was named The EVENING STAR.

Thus living on through such a length of years,
 The Shepherd, if he loved himself, must needs
 Have loved his Help-mate; but to Michael's heart
 This son of his old age was yet more dear—
 Effect which might perhaps have been produced
 By that instinctive tenderness, the same
 Blind Spirit, which is in the blood of all—
 Or that a child, more than all other gifts,
 Brings hope with it, and forward-looking thoughts,
 And stirrings of inquietude, when they
 By tendency of nature needs must fail.
 From such, and other causes, to the thoughts

Of the old Man his only Son was now
The dearest object that he knew on earth.
Exceeding was the love he bare to him,
His Heart and his Heart's joy ! For oftentimes
Old Michael, while he was a babe in arms,
Had done him female service, not alone
For dalliance and delight, as is the use
Of Fathers, but with patient mind enforced
To acts of tenderness ; and he had rocked
His cradle with a woman's gentle hand.

And, in a later time, ere yet the Boy
Had put on Boy's attire, did Michael love,
Albeit of a stern unbending mind,
To have the young one in his sight, when he
Had work by his own door, or when he sat
With sheep before him on his Shepherd's stool,
Beneath that large old Oak, which near their door
Stood, and, from its enormous breadth of shade

Chosen for the Shearer's covert from the sun,
 Thence in our rustic dialect was called
 The CLIPPING TREE*, a name which yet it bears.
 There, while they two were sitting in the shade,
 With others round them, earnest all and blithe,
 Would Michael exercise his heart with looks
 Of fond correction and reproof bestowed
 Upon the Child, if he disturbed the sheep
 By catching at their legs, or with his shouts
 Scared them, while they lay still beneath the shears.

And when by Heaven's good grace the Boy grew up
 A healthy Lad, and carried in his cheek
 Two steady roses that were five years old,
 Then Michael from a winter coppice cut

* Clipping is the word used in the North of England for shearing.

With his own hand a sapling, which he hooped
With iron, making it throughout in all
Due requisites a perfect Shepherd's Staff,
And gave it to the Boy ; wherewith equipt
He as a Watchman oftentimes was placed
At gate or gap, to stem or turn the flock ;
And to his office prematurely called
There stood the Urchin, as you will divine,
Something between a hindrance and a help ;
And for this cause not always, I believe,
Receiving from his Father hire of praise.
Though nought was left undone which staff or voice,
Or looks, or threatening gestures could perform.

But soon as Luke, full ten years old, could stand
Against the mountain blasts, and to the heights,
Not fearing toil, nor length of weary ways,
He with his Father daily went, and they
Were as companions, why should I relate
That objects which the Shepherd loved before

Were dearer now ? that from the Boy there came Feelings and emanations, things which were
 Light to the sun and music to the wind ;
 And that the Old Man's heart seemed born again.

Thus in his Father's sight the Boy grew up :
 And now when he had reached his eighteenth year,
 He was his comfort and his daily hope.

WHILE in the fashion which I have described
 This simple Household thus were living on
 From day to day, to Michael's ear there came Distressful tidings. Long before the time
 Of which I speak, the Shepherd had been bound
 In surety for his Brother's Son, a man
 Of an industrious life, and ample means,—
 But unforeseen misfortunes suddenly
 Had pressed upon him,—and old Michael now

Was summoned to discharge the forfeiture,
A grievous penalty, but little less
Than half his substance. This unlooked-for claim,
At the first hearing, for a moment took
More hope out of his life than he supposed
That any old man ever could have lost.
As soon as he had gathered so much strength
That he could look his trouble in the face,
It seemed that his sole refuge was to sell
A portion of his patrimonial fields.
Such was his first resolve ; he thought again,
And his heart failed him. " Isabel," said he,
Two evenings after he had heard the news,
" I have been toiling more than seventy years,
And in the open sun-shine of God's love
Have we all lived ; yet if these fields of ours
Should pass into a Stranger's hand, I think
That I could not lie quiet in my grave.
Our lot is a hard lot ; the Sun itself

Has scarcely been more diligent than I,
And I have lived to be a fool at last
To my own family. An evil Man
That was, and made an evil choice, if he
Were false to us ; and if he were not false,
There are ten thousand to whom loss like this
Had been no sorrow. I forgive him—but
'Twere better to be dumb than to talk thus.
When I began, my purpose was to speak
Of remedies and of a cheerful hope.
Our Luke shall leave us, Isabel ; the land
Shall not go from us, and it shall be free ;
He shall possess it, free as is the wind
That passes over it. We have, thou knowest,
Another Kinsman—he will be our friend
In this distress. He is a prosperous man,
Thriving in trade—and Luke to him shall go,
And with his Kinsman's help and his own thrift
He quickly will repair this loss, and then

May come again to us. If here he stay,
 What can be done ? Where every one is poor
 What can be gained ?" At this the old man paused,
 And Isabel sat silent, for her mind
 Was busy, looking back into past times.
 There's Richard Bateman, thought she to herself,
 He was a Parish-boy—at the Church-door
 They made a gathering for him, shillings, pence,
 And halfpennies, wherewith the neighbours bought
 A Basket, which they filled with Pedlar's wares ;
 And with this Basket on his arm the Lad
 Went up to London, found a Master there,
 Who out of many chose the trusty Boy
 To go and overlook his merchandise
 Beyond the seas ; where he grew wondrous rich,
 And left estates and moneys to the poor,
 And at his birth-place built a Chapel floored
 With Marble, which he sent from foreign lands.
 These thoughts, and many others of like sort,

Passed quickly through the mind of Isabel,
 And her face brightened. The Old Man was glad,
 And thus resumed:—"Well, Isabel! this scheme
 These two days has been meat and drink to me.
 Far more than we have lost is left us yet.
 —We have enough—I wish indeed that I
 Were younger,—but this hope is a good hope.
 —Make ready Luke's best garments, of the best
 Buy for him more, and let us send him forth
 Tomorrow, or the next day, or tonight :
 —If he could go, the Boy should go tonight."
 Here Michael ceased, and to the fields went forth
 With a light heart. The Housewife for five days
 Was restless morn and night, and all day long
 Wrought on with her best fingers to prepare
 Things needful for the journey of her Son.
 But Isabel was glad when Sunday came
 To stop her in her work : for, when she lay
 By Michael's side, she for the two last nights.

Heard him, how he was troubled in his sleep :
And when they rose at morning she could see
That all his hopes were gone. That day at noon
She said to Luke, while they two by themselves
Were sitting at the door, " Thou must not go :
We have no other child but thee to lose,
None to remember—do not go away,
For if thou leave thy Father he will die."
The Lad made answer with a jocund voice ;
And Isabel, when she had told her fears,
Recovered heart. That evening her best fare
Did she bring forth, and all together sat
Like happy people round a Christmas fire.

Next morning Isabel resumed her work ;
And all the ensuing week the house appeared
As cheerful as a grove in Spring : at length
The expected letter from their Kinsman came,
With kind assurances that he would do

His utmost for the welfare of the Boy ;
To which requests were added that forthwith
He might be sent to him. Ten times or more
The letter was read over ; Isabel
Went forth to show it to the neighbours round ;
Nor was there at that time on English Land
A prouder heart than Luke's. When Isabel
Had to her house returned, the Old Man said,
“ He shall depart tomorrow.” To this word
The Housewife answered, talking much of things
Which, if at such short notice he should go,
Would surely be forgotten. But at length
She gave consent, and Michael was at ease.

Near the tumultuous brook of Green-head Gill,
In that deep Valley, Michael had designed
To build a sheep-fold ; and, before he heard
The tidings of his melancholy loss,
For this same purpose he had gathered up

A heap of stones, which close to the brook side
 Lay thrown together, ready for the work.
 With Luke that evening thitherward he walked ;
 And soon as they had reached the place he stopped,
 And thus the Old Man spake to him :—" My Son,
 Tomorrow thou wilt leave me : with full heart
 I look upon thee, for thou art the same
 That wert a promise to me ere thy birth,
 And all thy life hast been my daily joy.
 I will relate to thee some little part
 Of our two histories ; 't will do thee good
 When thou art from me, even if I should speak
 Of things thou canst not know of.—After thou
 First cam'st into the world, as it befalls
 To new-born infants, thou didst sleep away
 Two days, and blessings from thy Father's tongue
 Then fell upon thee. Day by day passed on,
 And still I loved thee with increasing love.
 Never to living ear came sweeter sounds

Than when I heard thee by our own fire-side
 First uttering, without words, a natural tune ;
 When thou, a feeding babe, didst in thy joy
 Sing at thy Mother's breast. Month followed month,

And in the open fields my life was passed
 And in the mountains, else I think that thou
 Hadst been brought up upon thy Father's knees.
 But we were playmates, Luke : among these hills,
 As well thou know'st, in us the old and young
 Have played together, nor with me didst thou
 Lack any pleasure which a boy can know."
 Luke had a manly heart ; but at these words
 He sobbed aloud. The Old Man grasped his hand,
 And said, " Nay, do not take it so—I see
 That these are things of which I need not speak.
 —Even to the utmost I have been to thee
 A kind and a good Father : and herein
 I but repay a gift which I myself

Received at others' hands ; for, though now old
 Beyond the common life of man, I still Remember them who loved me in my youth.
 Both of them sleep together : here they lived,
 As all their Forefathers had done ; and when
 At length their time was come, they were not loth
 To give their bodies to the family mould.
 I wished that thou shouldst live the life they lived.
 But 'tis a long time to look back, my Son,
 And see so little gain from sixty years.
 These fields were burthened when they came to me ;
 Till I was forty years of age, not more
 Than half of my inheritance was mine.
 I toiled and toiled ; God blessed me in my work,
 And till these three weeks past the land was free.
 —It looks as if it never could endure
 Another Master. Heaven forgive me, Luke,
 If I judge ill for thee, but it seems good

That thou shouldst go." At this the Old Man paus'd;
 Then, pointing to the Stones near which they stood,
 Thus, after a short silence, he resumed :

" This was a work for us ; and now, my Son,
 It is a work for me. But, lay one Stone—
 Here, lay it for me, Luke, with thine own hands.
 Nay, Boy, be of good hope :—we both may live
 To see a better day. At eighty-four

I still am strong and stout ;—do thou thy part,
 I will do mine.—I will begin again
 With many tasks that were resigned to thee ;
 Up to the heights, and in among the storms,
 Will I without thee go again, and do
 All works which I was wont to do alone,
 Before I knew thy face.—Heaven bless thee, Boy !
 Thy heart these two weeks has been beating fast
 With many hopes—It should be so—Yes—yes—
 I knew that thou couldst never have a wish
 To leave me, Luke : thou hast been bound to me
 Only by links of love : when thou art gone,

What will be left to us !—But, I forget
 My purposes. Lay now the corner-stone,
 As I requested ; and hereafter, Luke,
 When thou art gone away, should evil men
 Be thy companions, think of me, my Son,
 And of this moment ; hither turn thy thoughts,
 And God will strengthen thee : amid all fear
 And all temptation, Luke, I pray that thou
 Mayst bear in mind the life thy Fathers lived,
 Who, being innocent, did for that cause
 Bestir them in good deeds. Now, fare thee well—
 When thou return'st, thou in this place wilt see
 A work which is not here ; a covenant
 'Twill be between us——But whatever fate
 Befall thee, I shall love thee to the last,
 And bear thy memory with me to the grave."

The Shepherd ended here : and Luke stooped down,
 And, as his Father had requested, laid
 The first stone of the Sheep-fold. At the sight

The Old Man's grief broke from him, to his heart
He pressed his Son, he kissed him and wept ;
And to the House together they returned.

Next morning, as had been resolved, the Boy
Began his journey, and when he had reached
The public Way, he put on a bold face ;
And all the Neighbours as he passed their doors
Came forth with wishes and with farewell prayers,
That followed him till he was out of sight.

A good report did from their Kinsman come,
Of Luke and his well-doing : and the Boy
Wrote loving letters, full of wondrous news,
Which, as the Housewife phrased it, were throughout

The prettiest letters that were ever seen.
Both parents read them with rejoicing hearts.
So, many months passed on : and once again

The Shepherd went about his daily work
 With confident and cheerful thoughts ; and now
 Sometimes when he could find a leisure hour
 He to that valley took his way, and there
 Wrought at the Sheep-fold. Meantime Luke began
 To slacken in his duty ; and at length
 He in the dissolute city gave himself
 To evil courses : ignominy and shame
 Fell on him, so that he was driven at last
 To seek a hiding-place beyond the seas.

There is a comfort in the strength of love ;
 'Twill make a thing endurable, which else
 Would break the heart :—Old Michael found it so.
 I have conversed with more than one who well
 Remember the Old Man, and what he was
 Years after he had heard this heavy news.
 His bodily frame had been from youth to age
 Of an unusual strength. Among the rocks

He went, and still looked up upon the sun,
And listened to the wind ; and as before
Performed all kinds of labour for his Sheep,
And for the land his small inheritance.
And to that hollow Dell from time to time
Did he repair, to build the Fold of which
His flock had need. 'Tis not forgotten yet
The pity which was then in every heart
For the Old Man—and 'tis believed by all
That many and many a day he thither went,
And never lifted up a single stone.

There, by the Sheep-fold, sometimes was he seen
Sitting alone, with that his faithful Dog,
Then old, beside him, lying at his feet.
The length of full seven years from time to time
He at the building of this Sheep-fold wrought,
And left the work unfinished when he died.
Three years, or little more, did Isabel

Survive her Husband: at her death the estate
Was sold, and went into a Stranger's hand.
The Cottage which was named The EVENING STAR
Is gone—the ploughshare has been through the ground
On which it stood; great changes have been wrought
In all the neighbourhood:—yet the Oak is left
That grew beside their Door; and the remains
Of the unfinished Sheep-fold may be seen
Beside the boisterous brook of Green-head Gill.

APPENDIX.

See Preface, page xliii.—“ by what is usually called Poetic Diction.”

---

As perhaps I have no right to expect from a Reader of an Introduction to a volume of Poems that attentive perusal without which it is impossible, imperfectly as I have been compelled to express my meaning, that what I have said in the Preface should throughout be fully understood, I am the more anxious to give an exact notion of the sense in which I use the phrase poetic diction; and for this purpose I will here add a few words concerning the origin of the phraseology which I have condemned under that name.——The earliest Poets of all nations generally wrote from passion excited by real events ; they wrote naturally, and as men : feeling powerfully as they did, their language was daring, and figurative. In succeeding times, Poets, and men ambitious of the fame of Poets, perceiving the influence of such language, and desirous of producing the same effect, without having the same animating passion, set themselves to a mechanical adoption of those figures of speech, and made use of them, sometimes with propriety, but much more frequently applied them to feelings and ideas with which they had no natural connection whatsoever. A language was thus insensibly produced, differing materially from the real language of men in any situation. The Reader or Hearer of this distorted language found himself in a perturbed and unusual state of mind : when affected by the genuine language of passion he had been in a perturbed and unusual state of mind also : in both cases he was willing that his common judgment and understanding should be laid asleep, and he had no instinctive and infallible perception of the true to make him reject the false; the one served as a passport for the other. The agitation and confusion of mind were in both cases delightful, and no wonder if he confounded the one with the other, and believed them both to be produced by the same, or similar causes. Besides, the Poet spake to him in the character of a man to be looked up to, a man of genius and authority. Thus, and from a variety of other causes, this distorted language was received with admiration; and Poets, it is probable, who had before contented themselves for the most part with misapplying only expressions which at first had been dictated by real passion, carried the abuse still further, and introduced phrases composed apparently in the spirit of the original figurative language of passion, yet altogether of their own invention, and distinguished by various degrees of wanton deviation from good sense and nature.

It is indeed true that the language of the earliest Poets was felt to differ materially from ordinary language, because it was the language of extraordinary occasions; but it was really spoken by men, language which the Poet himself had uttered when he had been affected by the events which he described, or which he had heard uttered by those around him. To this language it is probable that metre of some sort or other was early superadded. This separated the genuine language of Poetry still further from common life, so that whoever read or heard the poems of these earliest Poets felt himself moved in a way in which he had not been accustomed to be moved in real life, and by causes manifestly different from those which acted upon him in real life. This was the great temptation to all the corruptions which have followed: under the protection of this feeling succeeding Poets constructed a phraseology which had one thing, it is true, in common with the genuine language of poetry, namely, that it was not heard in ordinary conversation ; that it was unusual. But the first Poets, as I have said, spake a language which, though unusual, was still the language of men. This circumstance, however, was disregarded by their successors ; they found that they could please by easier means : they became proud of a language which they themselves had invented, and which was uttered only by themselves ; and, with the spirit of a fraternity, they arrogated it to themselves as their own. In process of time metre became a symbol or promise of this unusual language, and whoever took upon him to write in metre, according as he possessed more or less of true poetic genius, introduced less or more of this adulterated phraseology into his compositions, and the true and the false became so inseparably interwoven that the taste of men was gradually perverted ; and this language was received as a natural language ; and at length, by the influence of books upon men, did to a certain degree really become so. Abuses of this kind were imported from one nation to another, and with the progress of refinement this diction became daily more and more corrupt, thrusting out of sight the plain humanities of nature by a motley masquerade of tricks, quaintnesses, hieroglyphics, and enigmas.

It would be highly interesting to point out the causes of the pleasure given by this extravagant and absurd language : but this is not the place ; it depends upon a great variety of causes, but upon none perhaps more than its influence in impressing a notion of the peculiarity and exaltation of the Poet's character, and in flattering the Reader's self-love by bringing him nearer to a sympathy with that character ; an effect which is accomplished by unsettling ordinary habits of thinking, and thus assisting the Reader to approach to that perturbed and dizzy state of mind in which if he does not find himself, he imagines that he is balked of a peculiar enjoyment which poetry can, and ought to bestow.

The sonnet which I have quoted from Gray, in the Preface, except the lines printed in Italics, consists of little else but this diction, though not of the worst kind; and indeed, if I may be permitted to say so, it is far too common in the best writers, both antient and modern. Perhaps I can in no way, by positive example, more easily give my Reader a notion of what I mean by the phrase poetic diction than by referring him to a comparison between the metrical paraphrases which we have of passages in the old and new Testament, and those passages as they exist in our common Translation. See Pope's "Messiah" throughout, Prior's "Did sweeter sounds adorn my flowing tongue," &c. &c. "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels," &c. &c. See 1st Corinthians, chapter xiiiith. By way of immediate example, take the following of Dr. Johnson :

“ Turn on the prudent Ant thy heedless eyes,
Observe her labours, Sluggard, and be wise;
No stern command, no monitory voice,
Prescribes her duties, or directs her choice;
Yet, timely provident, she hastes away
To snatch the blessings of a plenteous day;
When fruitful Summer loads the teeming plain,
She crops the harvest and she stores the grain.
How long shall sloth usurp thy useless hours,
Unnerve thy vigour, and enchain thy powers?
While artful shades thy downy couch enclose,
And soft solicitation courts repose,
Amidst the drowsy charms of dull delight,
Year chases year with unremitted flight,
Till want now following, fraudulent and slow,
Shall spring to seize thee, like an ambushed foe.”

From this hubbub of words pass to the original.

“ Go to the Ant, thou Sluggard, consider her ways, and be wise : which having no guide, overseer, or ruler, provideth her meat in the summer, and gathereth her food in the harvest. How long wilt thou sleep, O Sluggard? when wilt thou arise out of thy sleep? Yet a little sleep, a little slumber, a little folding of the hands to sleep. So shall thy poverty come as one that travaileth, and thy want as an armed man." Proverbs, chap. vith.

One more quotation and I have done. It is from Cowper's verses supposed to be written by Alexander Selkirk :

" Religion! what treasure untold
Resides in that heavenly word!
More precious than silver and gold,
Or all that this earth can afford.
But the sound of the church-going bell
These valleys and rocks never heard,
Ne'er sighed at the sound of a knell,
Or smiled when a sabbath appeared.

Ye winds, that have made me your sport,
Convey to this desolate shore
Some cordial endearing report
Of a land I must visit no more.

My Friends, do they now and then send
 A wish or a thought after me?
 O tell me I yet have a friend,
 Though a friend I am never to see."

I have quoted this passage as an instance of three different styles of composition. The first four lines are poorly expressed; some Critics would call the language prosaic; the fact is, it would be bad prose, so bad, that it is scarcely worse in metre. The epithet "church-going" applied to a bell, and that by so chaste a writer as Cowper, is an instance of the strange abuses which Poets have introduced into their language till they and their Readers take them as matters of course, if they do not single them out expressly as objects of admiration. The two lines "Ne'er sigh'd at the sound," &c. are, in my opinion, an instance of the language of passion wrested from its proper use, and, from the mere circumstance of the composition being in metre, applied upon an occasion that does not justify such violent expressions; and I should condemn the passage, though perhaps few Readers will agree with me, as vicious poetic diction. The last stanza is throughout admirably expressed: it would be equally good whether in prose or verse, except that the Reader has an exquisite pleasure in seeing such natural language so naturally connected with metre. The beauty of this stanza tempts me here to add a sentiment which ought to be the pervading spirit of a system, detached parts of which have been imperfectly explained in the Preface,—namely, that in proportion as ideas and feelings are valuable, whether the composition be in prose or in verse, they require and exact one and the same language.

NOTES TO THE POEM OF THE BROTHERS.

NOTE I.

Page 27—line 1. "There were two springs which bubbled side by side." The impressive circumstance here described, actually took place some years ago in this country, upon an eminence called Kidstow Pike, one of the highest of the mountains that surround Hawes-water. The summit of the Pike was stricken by lightning; and every trace of one of the fountains disappeared, while the other continued to flow as before.

NOTE II.

Page 29—line 6. "The thought of death sits easy on the man," &c. There is not any thing more worthy of remark in the manners of the inhabitants of these mountains, than the tranquillity, I might say indifference, with which they think and talk upon the subject of death. Some of the country church-yards, as here described, do not contain a single tomb-stone, and most of them have a very small number.

NOTES TO THE POEM OF MICHAEL.

NOTE I.

Page 224—line 6. "There's Richard Bateman," &c. The story alluded to here is well known in the country. The chapel is called Ings Chapel; and is on the right-hand side of the road leading from Kendal to Ambleside.

NOTE II.

Page 227—line 15. "—— had designed to build a sheep-fold," &c. It may be proper to inform some readers, that a sheep-fold in these mountains is an unroofed building of stone walls, with different divisions. It is generally placed by the side of a brook, for the convenience of washing the sheep; but it is also useful as a shelter for them, and as a place to drive them into, to enable the shepherds conveniently to single out one or more for any particular purpose.
